HANDKERCHIEFS

Are Historical

THROUGHOUT MANY CIVILIZATIONS, handkerchiefs have had a singular destiny. They have been worn by peasant and noblemen, included in the dowries of many great personages and served as clever gifts.

The ancient Egyptians made handkerchiefs from their native reeds. Roman women greeted their favorite gladiators by waving "sudaria" of white Spanish or Egyptian linen. They also used them as face veils as they walked through the streets of Pompeii. At first, the Roman handkerchiefs were plain white squares, evolving into elaborately woven and fringed "mappa".

In early Christian history, handkerchiefs were used mainly as ritual objects and it was only in the 15th Century that they became popular again as a fashion auxiliary. An important member of the Sforza family received more than 400 "fazoletti" (handkerchiefs to us) from her fiance. Linen was the favorite fabric at this time, coming from the French city of Rheims, which later became famous for its champagne. Women of the leisure class would embroider their "kerchiefs with "reticella" work, often creating their own designs.

Under the leadership of the Italian Catherine de Medici, in the 16th Century, elaborately embroidered and perfumed handkerchiefs became great favorites at the French court . . . sumptuary laws prevented their use by the general public. In the 1600's, handkerchiefs were recognized as an indispensable fashion accessory, as important as jewelry and often as costly. The emergence of Paris as a fashion center is illustrated by a copper engraving called "La Gallerie de Paris", one of the first known "boutiques," which shows handkerchiefs being sold, along with other accessories.

Until this period, handkerchiefs had been a luxury available only to the very rich. In fact, limited to them by law. The introduction of efficient textile printing methods in the 17th Century, turned the once exclusive "handkercher" into a readily available and inexpensive article. "Conversation" prints became the vogue and museum pieces show that subjects were varied and interesting.

PARIS TRENDS

in Jewelry

THE PASSEMENTERIE INFLUENCE is of prime importance in the new Paris jewelry. With accent on gold, the imaginative designs include twisted cord, fringe, tassels and braid, to fashion necklaces, earrings, clips, and bracelets.

The famous jewelers whose shops line the Place Vendôme, feature bracelets in this category of heavy twisted gold cord, dramatized by a diamond bar from which hangs supple gold tassels. Other "whimsies" include: bracelet of chiseled gold with "picot" edge of diamonds, festooned through center with gold cord... bowknot clip of multiple loops in open-work gold studded with rubies; necklaces of gold rope of Victorian inspiration, with pendant motifs of loops or tassels. Several gold tassels, swinging from a medallion of gold and diamonds, fashion distinctive earrings.

There are more watch-rings in Paris than have been seen in a long time. Many of them are elaborately set with diminutive faces, bordered with several rows of diamonds or other precious stones. And speaking of rings, one well-known jeweler mounts colored gems high upon bands of gold, engraved to resemble braid or cording. Edgings of diamonds support the smallest of supple gold tassels... made of fine-linked chains. A notable trend in Parisian rings, is the tendency to set oblong stones crosswise, rather than in the conventional manner.

French jewelers continue to develop designs with emphasis on pliability. For instance, large diamond drops cleverly swaying on gold mobile leaves for a fascinating clip; jeweled stamens in the center of flexible gold or platinum flower clips... which of course increases the scintillation of any faceted stone.

Jewelry designers are also lending new interest to many smart pieces, by featuring asymmetrical lines. Tree-branch clips or pins, clusters of flowers and fruit, feather clips, all take their asymmetry from nature. The idea is extended to diamond necklaces, knotted like ribbon at one side, or by asymmetrical motifs in pendants.

Energy Potential of Wool Similar to that of Muscle

"WOOL IS CHARGED with locked-in energy waiting to be released," reports Mr. Giles E. Hopkins, technical director of the Wool Bureau, New York City. "The fiber not only can be extended, bent, twisted and then returned to its initial shape and dimensions, but its built-in energy can cause the fiber to shorten itself in much the same way as we flex our muscles."

This "restlessness" of wool fibers is important because it helps to prevent packing down of fabrics. The three-dimensional crimp of wool makes for "lofty" fabrics which trap a maximum volume of air for heat insulation and also allow water vapor to escape.

When it comes to chemistry, we find more paradoxes in wool's properties, for scientists have discovered that the outer membrane is chemically inert . . . it protects the fiber from many types of accidental chemical change. Chemical treatments, as dyeing, must be designed to penetrate this protective sheath.

Wool can be dyed with a wide variety of dyestuffs to give the desired combination of hue, brilliance and fastness against light, perspiration, heat, washing, dry cleaning, etc. This is because wool crosses that critical boundary which divides acids from alkalies. It can behave as either an alkali or acid and can react with either one.

Free wool fibers when immersed in water, will wriggle about with enough energy to push each other aside. Even changes in the relative humidity of the surrounding atmosphere, will cause the fibers to twist or rotate.

An impermeable membrane on the outer scales of the wool fiber makes it actually water repellent. This gives wool garments much of their water-shedding quality . . . a quality that is most apparent in textured wool fabrics, such as tweeds and the like, that have resilient broken surfaces to aid in repelling rain.

The ability of this outer membrane to shed water is in apparent contradiction to another important characteristic of wool. Openings in this same membrane allow water vapor to enter the honeycombed interior of the fiber. This inner structure has an immense capacity for absorption . . . which accounts for wool's great comfort and lack of clamminess.

Cat Cay

BAHAMAS

"Home, home on Cat Cay—where the marlin and tuna fish play. Where seldom is heard, a discourteous word, and the sun shines its brightest all day."

So think some sixteen families from all over these United States, which is why a colony of privately owned Bahamian cottages sprung up on this tiny, palm-fringed island 50 miles east of South Florida, to supplement the cottages owned by officials of Cat Cay, who have organized themselves into the Cat Key Club. The homes also supplement the dining and recreation facilities provided at the Manor, Kitten Key Bar, as well as the island's golf, skeet and tennis clubs. Which doesn't of course, overlook those fishing grounds surrounding the island, and make it world famous in the first place.

Latest home to be completed at Cat Cay is Mercer House, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Mercer of New York. Under construction most of last year, the beautiful two-story home, complete with swimming pool, is all ready this season for the numerous social events its owners expect to give.

Heretofore the Mercers lived aboard their yacht, "Bluejacket", Mrs. Mercer had a "picnic" decorating her home, which stands high on a hill for a better view of the white sandy beaches and the blue waters that surround Cat Cay. She has done a masterful job, adhering to modern simplicity, so practical for a house in the tropics.

"Forever Ambling" is the name of the attractive home the Wendell W. Andersons have built on Cat Cay. Completely hidden by tropical plantings, the house, as do all homes on the island, faces the beach, with the water practically at its front door. Big game fishing is the hobby of both Mr. and Mrs. Anderson and some months ago the couple went on a research expedition to Peru for Yale University.

Building a home is a major project in anybody's life, but especially so at Cat Cay, where all materials have to be brought to the island. But that didn't keep the Arthur E. Pews, Jr., from constructing a cool, pink house on Cat Cay that fronts the ocean and is conducive to outdoor living. A tropical garden is part of the landscape scheme of their home, and lighting in the garden from a bright tropical moon, or on those nights when the moon is under a cloud, from man-made illumination, is a sight to behold.

A terrace surrounding a pool is an ideal spot for a patio party, and that's just the kind of entertainment for which Pew House is famous. The Pews also own a ketch, "Mercury V" and take many trips to surrounding spots during their Cat Cay winter sojourn — especially when their children, Dickie and Shelagh, join them during vacations from school.

"Pelican Point" is the location of the Robert E. Barbour's home on Cat Cay, and if you happen by this attractive many-windowed house and find the owners out, like as not they're on Windsor Downs Golf Course at Cat Cay. Both are excellent golfers, and hold many Cat Cay Golf awards, Mr. Barbour having won the Windsor Downs cup in 1948. The Barbour's don't exactly collect buttons, as do many "antique lovers", but they do have two—one their fish boat, one a poodle. Both are named "Buttons."

Home of the Louis R. Waseys (owners of Cat Cay), is a combination of traditional and modern, for Mrs. Wasey takes an annual summer trip to England to purchase items for Cat Cays famous English shop—she can't resist buying a few things for her own home.

All white is the Bahamian home of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Olin, a two-story house that is the last one on the north end of the island. New Orleans iron grille work creates a lacy decor to this tropical home which has French doors and windows shuttered with Southern type blinds.

The Frederick C. Crawfords of Cleveland, Ohio, never have to buy pictures for the walls of their home, "Hi Tide", at Cat Cay. Reason, of course, is that Mr. Crawford's hobby is water coloring, and every room of Hi-Tide has at least one of his landscapes depicting a typical Cat Cay scene.

The Crawfords have the coveted southeast tip of Cat Cay for their very modern home. Most popular "room" in the house is the screenless outdoor dining area and barbecue, near the pool. It's here—right on the rafters—that members of the Cat Cay Fire Brigade hang their helmets, and with good reason too, although there's seldom a fire of any kind on this island, famous for its warm climate. Mr. Crawford is fire chief; organizes any fire drills.

The Henry Sears are home owners at Cat Cay—so is George W. Collier of Wilmington, Del. The Carl Badenhausens are proud to be property owners at Cat Cay and the John B. Fords, Jr., have built one of the island's most elaborate homes.

The Roy Fruehaufs of Detroit, regulars to Cat Cay and to South Florida, too, were among hosts at a dinner party in Sir Clifford Bede Dining Hall, and preceding dinner there, in the Kitten Key Bar for cocktails (walls of this famous cocktail lounge are adorned with signatures of many greats, including the Duke and Duchess of Windsor). Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fisher of Birmingham, Mich.; Alfonso Landa of Washington, D. C.; Dr. Kegham Chutsian of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Hans W. Rawe (he is manager of Cat Cay), Albert Wrisley (manager of Cat Cay Club) and Robert Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Smith have come all the way from Tygwyn, Wales to visit at Cat Cay, and the Howard McGinnis of Cleveland, also are at Cat Cay, Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Patterson of New York are visitors to this famous little island, and with them, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Prime of N. Y.

Shoes for Spring - Light in Color and Construction

IF YOU LIKE TO PEER INTO THE FUTURE, here is the big news for Spring in footwear. Leather will be lighter in weight and color and all shoes lighter in construction . . . beautiful to look at and wonderfully comfortable to wear.

The most important leathers, according to the Leather Industries of America, will be the aniline-dyed calfskin, glove-soft kidskin, supple cattlehide, rich velvety suedes, patent and the entire reptile family with special emphasis on lizard and snakeskins.

In the realm of color, the pale blonde tones, such as beige, honey and the lighter brown shades are of paramount importance in the aniline calfs and kids. The majority of suedes will appear in jet black.

For cocktail and evening wear, smart shoes will run the gamut of pale pinks, blues, greens, yellows . . . as well as the glowing gunmetals, burnished bronzes and silver. Developed in the glove-soft kid leathers, these colorful shoes are as fashion-right for formal wear as they are to accent afternoon woollens, jerseys and soft dressmaker suits. All of which will be important in the Spring wardrobe. If the sandals or pumps are not too formal in design of course.

The all-white leather shoe staged a return to vogue last year and, according to predictions, will be even more popular, come Spring of 1954. In casuals and formal-type construction, the "white footnotes" will appear in calfskin and buckskin for the former, with linen and novelties for "dressier" shoes—pumps, sling-back sandals, stripping effects, etc.

Newer than the all-white interpretations are the white leathers merged with color. For instance, white buckskin spectators accented with brown, navy and black calfskin; beige calf opera pumps with lacy white kid trimming; white kidskin dramatized with underlays of brilliant suede designs, studded with rhinestones, or pointed up with gleaming black patent leather.

Society Life

THE SOCIAL LIFE OF PALM BEACH began earlier than ever this year. Long before the hotels were open for the season, Palm Beach residents were giving informal dinner and luncheon parties in their homes. Now, with the Seminole Golf Club, Everglades, Bath and Tennis, Gulf Stream Golf, Gulf Stream Bath and Tennis, Sailfish Yacht and Beach Club, and all the others officially open, the social life of the community is really in full swing.

During the holidays, when the sons and daughters of the resorters were home for their vacations from the various schools and colleges all over the country, Palm Beach was gay with young laughter, and there were informal gatherings everywhere.

There also have been a number of engagements announced, and some weddings. Among the younger members of the Cottage Colony who plan to be married during the winter, spring or summer is Miss Lucie Bedford Cunningham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Briggs S. Cunningham, of 306 Pendleton Ave. and Greens Farms, Conn., whose engagement was announced on January 3rd to Mr. Stewart Brett McKinney, son of Mrs. James B. "Racing". . . A Pageant of Art and Turf History at the Society of the Four Arts

THE FIRST ARTISTIC EVENT of the Palm Beach winter season was a brilliant one: the opening of the exhibition of paintings and mementoes of the turf entitled "Racing," at the Society of the Four Arts. Probably the most impressive showing devoted to this topic ever to be assembled in this country, the exhibition also proved itself a memorable social event in many unusual ways.

The collection of fine, notable or highly historic paintings assembled and displayed in a manner that did great credit to Mr. Allen McNab, art advisor to the Society, was the first major exhibit of art works on the topic since the 1939 display entitled "Hunting and Racing." The Four Arts showing did not include hunting, and, because of its brilliance and the opulent response of many of this country's finest collectors, was the most important exhibition of the sort ever to have been brought together on this side of the Atlantic.

In all, thirty-two nationally-known collectors contributed important canvases from among their art treasures to be shown by the Society. The Palm Beach winter colony participating generously included the names of Col. and Mrs. Harold Fowler, Paul R. Ilynsky, Mrs. Vaughan C. Spaulding and Mrs. Widener Wichfeld.

From prominent collections in Miami notable loans were made by Alfred I. Barton, Mrs. Forbes Hawkes, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Dale Shaffer, and Arnold Hanger.

Other collectors whose generosity gave special lustre to the "Racing" exhibition make a very impressive list: Mrs. John Payson Adams, Mrs. Graham known as Miss Elizabeth Arden, F. Ambrose Clark, C. V. Hickox, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Francis Hutton, Walter M. Jeffords, Charles E. Mather, II, Paul Mellon, E. J. Rousuck, Mrs. H. L. Straus, Mrs. C. H. Thieriot, Cortright Wetherill, C. V. Whitney, Forsyth Wickes, George D. Widener, S. Bryce Wing, Mr. and Mrs. William Cox Wright.

In addition, the display was enhanced by a loan from Yale University, the self-portrait of Edward Troye, illustrated herewith, a delightful piece of Americana depicting the artist justly famous for his paintings of great horses of the early American turf. The National Museum of Racing added to the interest of this painting by lending the watch, binoculars and painting tools of the artist. Henry Brenner, the sculptor who executed the life-sized bronze of "Billy Barton" that adorns the entrance to the Laurel Racetrack lent the preliminary small sculpture of the great horse to this exhibit. Lastly, through the courtesy of John C. Clarke, president of Hialeah Race Course, silks from the great stables competing this year at Hialeah added particular color and flavor to this memorable presentation.

John C. Clarke, in his foreword to the catalog to the exhibit, aptly keynoted its numerous merits as "a sort of living chronicle." He also reminded us of something that became very striking, going from one work to another, namely, that "only the sovereigns of modern history have been as carefully and consistently recorded in oil as the royal sires and dams and turf-rulers," shown thanks to the generosity of racing and art enthusiasts around the country.

Edouard Manet's "Course au Bois de Boulogne," lent by John Hay Whitney, was the most notable canvas on display relating directly neither to the historical lore of the turf nor to portraiture of great horses that have illustrated it. A rare bronze, a very spirited piece, by the painter Degas, lent by Mrs. Forbes Hawkes, probably should come next. But then how can one do proper justice to the merits of other notable works such as the "Warren Hill, Newmarket" by John Wootton, the earliest depiction of a racing meet being shown, lent by Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Hutton.

Returning to each canvas in turn the temptation arose to annotate each and every work as it was enumerated in the catalog. Each has its own special merit or merits and claims upon our interest. From the hieratic "Flying Children" of James Seymour, lent by Colonel and Mrs. Harold Fowler, to Carle Vernet's "Five Racers Preparing to Start" belonging to the Forsyth Wickes collection, from the "Newmarket, King's Plate," lent by Mrs. Widener Wichfeld, who has a predilection for the works of Francis Sartorius, to the Sir Alfred J. Munnings' canvas "Going to the Start," highlighting the other end of the gallery, thanks to one of a number of loans by Mr. and Mrs. William Cox Wright, the atmosphere throughout was one of tempered brilliance.

The artistic, the historic, the social and the sentimental with regard to racing giants of the past, all vied with each other in distinguishing and bringing into prominence every piece on display.

The historians of the turf probably selected other works because of great names of racing giants.

Regardless, however, of the criterion one selected such paintings as the portrait of "Eclipse" by George Stubbs, lent, together with nine other notable works, by F. Ambrose Clark from his rich collection, typified by its many-faceted merits the brilliant attraction of this opening event of the Palm Beach art season of 1953-1954.

Mrs. Paul Healy of New York, Paris and Lake Forest, Ill., one of the distinguished old-timers of Palm Beach society, whose winter address is the Everglades Club. Active in the resort social scene, Mrs. Healy belongs to the Bath and Tennis and Everglades Clubs and the Society of the Four Arts in Palm Beach. The Chicago Woman's Athletic, Chevy Chase (Washington, D. C.), Regency (New York), Polo de Paris, Bagatelle and Union Interalliee of Paris.

IT WAS A GILDED ATMOSPHERE for the traditional formal dinner-dance opening of the Everglades Club New Year's Eve. The theme was gold and the entire place was luminous with golden decorations, flowers and lights.

At the entrance, in the main foyer, there was a twenty-five foot gold and white Christmas tree, aglow with a myriad of twinkling lights. Huge white lanterns dramatized the loggia adjacent to the marble patio, where additional lanterns were effectively placed at intervals. Here an orchestra played soft music during dinner.

In the main lounge and throughout the club, large yellow and white chrysanthemums were used in profusion, accented with gold foliage. Golden garlands lent grace and drama and for a very modern touch, there were tremendous white three-dimensional snowflakes, suspended from the chandeliers.

The dining room echoed the golden symphony in flowers, gold woodwardia ferns and garlands. In the Bali Bar, the color theme deviated and the traditional Yuletide red and green, highlighted with silver, was the chosen decor. Red carnations in silver holders . . . silver bells all over the place . . . white reindeer decorating the wall mirrors.

The Orange Gardens, where the dancing took place until the small hours of the morning, long after the singing of Auld Lang Syne, repeated the midas touch. The bandshell was backed with cloth of gold, pillars were wrapped with golden garlands, yellow and white flowers centered the tables. The Meyer Davis Orchestra under the direction of Billy Marshall, furnished music for the gala occasion.

More than 700 members and their guests attended the formal opening of the Club and several hundred persons came in later for the New Year's festivities. As usual, the gowns and jewels of the feminine contingent, presented a veritable fashion show. As in former years, the Orange Gardens, dining room and main lounge, were called into service for dinner. It was a gay affair in a brilliant setting . . . conceded to be one of the most glamorous parties in the Everglades Club in years.

The Club has a definite "new look" for the 1954 season, which according to Lamar Harmon, manager, will be one of the most interesting and exciting in its history. Virtually the entire first floor of the main club has been refurnished and redecorated. The central loggia adjacent to the marble patio has been painted and carpeted in sea green. The main lounge has relinquished the heavy Spanish furnishings for modern tables and chairs, in a smart turquoise and coral theme; arranged in cocktail settings. The draperies and divans repeat the color scheme in effective prints.

The Silver Room, formerly the Grey Room, has been completely transformed. The walls are finished with silver paint, alternated with panels of dusty coral and silver wallpaper, in an abstract design. Tables, chairs and lamps in modern-Chinese influence, are silver, coral and jade green. The fireplace has been redesigned in the Oriental motif.

Regency, in an elegant and dignified manner, is the new interior decorating for the card room, which has been acclaimed one of the most magnificent rooms of its kind in the country. Developed in tones of charcoal grey, accented with green and white, the Regency period has been faithfully reproduced in every detail of the furnishings and decorating. Wall mirrors as a background for crystal light fixtures, lend added spaciousness to the large room. Especially designed fabric with Regency medallions, distinguish the huge divans, to form an interesting contrast with the satin and textured upholstery of the chairs.

Comdr. A. Winfield Chapin, his mother and father Mr. and Mrs. H. Winfield Chapin and Mrs. Chapin, photographed in the new Regency Room at the Everglades Club, during a luncheon party for the elder Mr. Chapin, observing his birthday anniversary.

White and gold striped swag-decorated curtains; glittering crystal chandeliers; drum-shaped and marble tiered coffee tables; gold tassel-trimmed lamp shades; all add atmosphere and eclat. Dramatizing the beautiful room are colorful murals in a Regency theme by the noted artist Riccardo Magni; these occupy walls at two sides of the room. All of the decorating for the main club was done by Jerry Valentine.

Something new has also been added to the tennis courts . . . a pro shop, built like a beach house with green and white striped awnings. And, for the convenience of golfers, there is a new and spacious storage and garage building, on the golf course.

Seasonal activities at the Everglades Club will follow the same pattern established several years ago: Tuesday night, games; Thursday, entertainment night, featuring stars of the stage, TV and radio; Saturday, the weekly dancing party. Plans are being formulated for the gala parties in the main club, which will include the annual George Washington Ball, Circus Party and Hospital Ball . . . this year for the benefit of Good Samaritan. Weekly Tombola-luncheon-fashion shows, started January 6. Informal dinner-dancing on the Golf Terrace nightly, except when there is a special party in the Orange Gardens. Luncheon there daily, with the exception of Wednesdays.

The Everglades Club personnel remains practically the same as for the past several seasons: Edward E. Bartlett, Jr., president; Lamar Harmon, manager; D'Arcy Rutherford, social secretary; Jack Ross, golf pro; Herman Petersen, tennis pro; Bill Meyer, maitre d'hotel and Avis Schmidt, assistant; Edmund Fonternier, chef; Billy Marshall, director of the orchestra; Edward Monahan and "Bunny" at the door. New to the club this year, James O. Libbey of Washington, D.C., who is assistant to Mr. Harmon. Mr. Libbey was a Lieutenant Commander in the Navy during World War II and later secretary to Senator Simmons of North Carolina, chairman of the finance committee. He recently has been managing summer theaters in Bar Harbor, Newport and New Jersey.

POWER SQUADRON ACTIVE

in Palm Beach Boating

PEOPLE ARE JUST BEGINNING TO ARRIVE to spend the season entertaining and cruising aboard the sleek yachts tied up at local docks, but the Palm Beach Power Squadron has been on the job all year with its constructive program for increased boat safety and pleasure. Members of the power squadron and the ladies of the power squadron auxiliary are such enthusiastic yachtsmen they never rest in the pursuit of high boating standards.

It was just ten years ago that several prominent yachtsmen organized the Power Squadron, an affiliate of the United States Power Squadrons. There were ten members, in the beginning. The four original officers, Henry Clay Gibson, commander; Roscoe Tate Anthony, lieutenant commander; Le Roy Coates Gross, secretary and James MacAllen Ballentine, treasurer, still retain their membership.

Commander Gross succeeded Commander Gibson to become the Power Squadron's second leader, and served two one-year terms, 1946 to 1948. Comdr. A. Winfield Chapin served from 1948 to 1949, followed by Comdr. Todd H. Green in 1950. In 1952 Comdr. John O. Manning took the office, which he still holds.

Membership in the organization has grown to seventy-five, an impressive number for one locality in view of the fact all members must take and pass a ten-week piloting course and examination. The educational program consists of five required grades in piloting, seamanship, advanced piloting, junior navigation and navigation, as well as three elective courses of weather, engine maintenance and sail.

So high are the standards of these courses that the United States Army has accepted a completely endorsed United States Power Squadron certificate in lieu of a four year college education from applicants for a commission in the harbor craft units of the transportation corps.

In addition to the educational opportunities provided toward better boating, the squadron has a varied and extensive social program, featuring two rendezvous, two graduation dinner dances and one cruise each year. A program of inter-squadron social activities was inaugurated recently, with the result eight yachts with forty members cruised the inland waterway to attend the Miami squadron's winter graduation dinner dance on the weekend of January 9.

Members and guests who made the cruise were: Commander Manning, whose "Sea Phantom" was flagship; Lt. Comdr. John S. Lawson, in "Nosotros"; Past Comdr. Leroy Coates Gross, in the "Ponnie", Past Comdr. George C. T. Remington, and his "Kenhyrd"; Henry I. Cohn, Jr., in the "Ginny Cee"; Beaumont Davidson and "Cherub"; Thomas Marino in "Allomar IV"; Herbert A. Rissier in "Pop's Dream" and Howard E. Turner in "Olde Salte". The eight yachts following Commander Manning's flagship served as the Palm Beach Squadron's fleet for the trip. Crews aboard the yachts included Mr. and Mrs. Menzo Bridge, Mr. Charles Capron, Mr. and Mrs. George Cardwell, Commander Chapin, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Clarke, Mrs. Henry I. Cohn, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coppage, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cuthrell, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Daversa, Mrs. Beaumont Davidson, Past Commander Gibson, Mrs. Lenore Green, Mrs. Leroy C. Gross and her mother, Mrs. Elwood; Mrs. John S. Lawson, lt. comdr. woman's auxiliary to the Palm Beach Power Squadron; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert MacDonald, Paul Maddock, Mrs. John O. Manning, commander woman's auxiliary; Mrs. Thomas Marino, Mr. Lee Ottman, Mr. and Mrs. William Pavitt, Mrs. Herbert Pissier, Mr. Ray Taylor, Mrs. Howard Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Van de Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Van Dyke and Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Ward.

And speaking of Miami, as all yachting enthusiasts do frequently because the numerous yachting events there attract boats from both coasts, the Orange Bowl Navy gave a brilliant performance to send Miami's 20th annual Orange Bowl festival off to a gala start.

Palm Beach winter based yachts participating in the New Year's season spectacle in Miami were the Leon Mandels "Carola", a one hundred and twenty-five foot beauty which claims Chicago as permanent registry; and the T. G. Markleys' "Wilmar", from Baton Rouge. Both yachts, based at the Palm Beach Biltmore dock when not cruising, are the scenes of frequent parties, tops in entertainment.

Silver and gold lights mingled with blue, green and red outlined the rigging and reflected in gleaming superstructures as yachts and cruisers massed off the bayfront for the opening of the holiday pageantry. Extending nearly from the mouth of the Miami river to NE Fifth Street, the line of yachts made an amazing picture for thousands of spectators.

Adding to the fun were a barge with giant king orange and poinsettias, a three-tiered birthday cake and a giant,

The "Lysander," owned by Mrs. Hoey's son, Mr. Lazare Baker of Tampa and Mrs. Baker, was the scene of a gay cocktail party recently, when the Hoey's and Bakers entertained their Palm Beach friends before a trek to Rio de Janeiro for the Hoey's and return to Tampa for the Bakers. The "Lysander" was originally built for the King of Greece and is equipped for royal entertaining.

diamond jubilee of electricity sign all illuminated. On another nearby barge, twenty admirals and commodores received their commissions as officers of the Orange Bowl Navy as aerial salutes, sunbursts and streamers of red, green and blue fire flashed through the skies.

In addition to the Mandels and Markleys, several other well known Palm Beach yachtsmen took part in the festival. H. Hood Bassett, of the "Marett III", is secretary of the navy of the Orange Bowl Navy, participated in the commissioning of skippers, none below the rank of commodore. After being handed their commissions, the assembled sea-dogs pledged their seafaring health in Mayday punch, a concoction brewed by Fleet Comdr. Charles H. Baker, and named after the international distress signal.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Heermann of Philadelphia came down in early January to enjoy the season aboard their sparkling "Clare H. IV", always one of the most perfectly kept boats berthed at the Brazilian Avenue dock.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Richards of Philadelphia are spending the season in their Embassy Apartments suite, while taking the "Huns Buddy III" out for frequent trips.

Holiday season visitors on board locally berthed docks were Mr. and Mrs. Cook and children, who enjoyed gulf fishing trips aboard the Louis Keelers' "Karina"; and the children of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gulbenkian of Larchmont, who vacationed aboard the "Capricorn". Reverse visit during the holidays was the trip to Hamilton, Ontario, Canada made by Francis Farwell, who is now back aboard his "Arara".

One of the smart dinner-dances of the season was one held aboard his yacht, the "President Trujillo," berthed at the Port of Palm Beach, by General Rafael L. Trujillo, president of the Dominican Republic. Holiday guests aboard the yacht were Mr. Jose Manuel Cochon, Mr. Andres Alba and Mr. Victor Suad, all of Ciudad Trujillo, the Dominican capital.

Mr. and Mrs. Benson Ford, of Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan, and children, Benson Ford, Jr. and Lynn, are due momentarily at their home on Middle Road. Mr. and Mrs. Ford were down earlier in the season, returning for their children. The entire family is expected to spend quite a bit of time aboard the "Onika," their forty-one foot yacht, with Caribbean cruising on the agenda.

BENEATH THE DESCENDING RAYS OF A SETTING SUN A DAY OF BASS FISHING IN THE EVERGLADES ENDS ON A NOTE OF TRANQUIL BEAUTY AS WELL AS PRIDE.

M-I-A-M-I — The Magic City

MIAMI, FLA. — Four rich stake races, an opera, a Spanish dancing performance, two symphony concerts, a top golf tournament and a custom car show await Palm Beachers and all visitors alike in Miami.

There can be little doubt, this city's winter schedule of events is hitting its high point.

Opening of Hialeah last Saturday proved a stellar affair with special festivities surrounding the new $2,500,000 clubhouse of a French Mediterranean design. Furnishings are of 18th century French flavor. The structure has more than three acres of floor space, seats 5,000 bettors, nearly triple the number provided in the old clubhouse, 162 boxes, six escalators, four elevators and five grand staircases.

Newest innovation is the heliport which provides landing space for helicopters commuting between here and Palm Beach as well as other resort areas.

The clubhouse has more than a 280 per cent increase in dining room seats. Other facilities in the new structure, designed by Lester Geistler, are numerous mutual windows on the first and second floors, concession stands, lounges, promenades, terraces and kitchens.

Upcoming stake races at Hialeah are the $15,000 Hibiscus, scheduled for tomorrow (Jan. 23), the $15,000 Palm Beach handicap, Jan. 27, the $15,000 Royal Palm, Jan. 30, and the $15,000 Bahamas, Feb. 3.

Tomorrow night (Jan. 23) the Greater Miami Opera Guild will present "Madame Butterfly" at the Dade County auditorium. Featured will be Licia Albanese, soprano; Mack Morgan, baritone; Thelma Altman, mezzo soprano; John Crane, tenor, and Claramae Turner, mezzo soprano.

Jose Greco and his Spanish dancing troupe move into the auditorium Sunday (Jan. 24) for a one-night performance. His show will be followed Monday by Szymon Goldberg, violinist, and the University of Miami symphony orchestra.

One of the leading women amateur golf tournaments, the 22nd annual Helen Lee Doherty, begins Jan. 27 through Jan. 31 at the Miami Shores Country Club. This will mark the first appearance of the tournament at Miami Shores. In previous years it has been held at the Miami Country Club. The nation's leading women amateurs, led by Mary Lena Faulk, United States amateur champion and defending Doherty titlist, are expected to compete.

Another concert, which should interest Michigan vacationers particularly, is the performance of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra in Dade County auditorium, Jan. 28.

Among attractions calculated to interest Miami visitors is the $50,000,000 Villa Vizcaya, owned by the late James Deering, farm machine magnate, now the property of Dade County. This fabulous estate's formal gardens are among the most beautiful in the United States. The mansion itself is patterned after an Italian fortress-palace.

Reconstruction of a Spanish cloister built in 1141, and purchased by the late William Randolph Hearst, has been completed here. The cloister was built by Alphonso VII in Segovia province to commemorate his victory over the Moors. Hearst purchased the building in 1926, had it dismantled and shipped to this country. The cloister was later purchased by Cincinnati business men and reconstruction was made here.

Nightly attractions include greyhound racing at West Flagler Kennel and Miami Beach Kennel clubs and jai alai at the Miami Fronton.

NO SHIP TO SHORE radio needed here. Friends may bid their welcome or wish "bon voyage" to fortunate cruise travellers from this palm-shaded causeway that links Miami and Miami Beach.

From Malenkov to "The Playboy of the Western World" ~ ~ ~ Palm Beach Round Table To Have Brilliant Season

FROM "AN HOUR WITH ARTHUR TREACHER" and an address by Maj. George Racey Jordan on "the Black Suitcases", the story of the leaks of top level arms secrets to the Soviets during the war, with which the Palm Beach Round Table started its 1954 season, to a lecture by the Ambassador of the Union of South Africa, G. P. Jooste, to be given March 15th, the Round Table is offering a brilliantly stimulating program this year.

The forthcoming events, to be given in the Orange Gardens of the Everglades Club, are scheduled as follows:

January 25th at 4 p.m.: Gen. Carlos P. Romulo will speak on "Today's World — Tomorrow's Goals." General Romulo, whose personal magnetism and contagious conviction were decisively influential in the recent Philippine election of President Magsaysay, was 1949 president of the General Assembly of the United Nations; winner of the Pulitzer prize for journalism in recognition of articles predicting the Japanese aggression of 1941; former Philippine ambassador to the United States and fervent friend of this country.

February 1st, at 4 p.m.: Martin Ebon, whose topic will be "Malenkov's Succession of Stalin". Mr. Ebon, author, editor and teacher will analyze with his accustomed brilliance the probable course of Soviet strategy over the next five years, based on his study of the Russian mind and his knowledge of the Soviet perspective. Mr. Ebon is the author of the recently published "Malenkov, Stalin's Successor".

February 8th, at 4 p.m.: A Panel of World Affairs

Experts: Camille Chautemps, former French premier, who will speak on "Europe"; Cuneyd Dosdogru, attached to the ECA Information Office in Ankara, who will discuss "Near East—Middle East"; Melchior Aquino, liaison officer between the Philippine government and U.S. Army general headquarters, speaking on "The Far East"; John C. Metcalf, who has covered many famous international conferences in the U.S., Europe and Latin America, whose topic will be "United States—Latin America".

February 21st, 8:30 p.m.: The Dublin Players present John Millington Synge's most famous play "The Playboy of the Western World," in the tradition of the Abbey Theatre.

March 1st, at 4 p.m.: Mrs. Oswald B. Lord, U.S. representative to the U.N. Commission on Human Rights, speaking on "Women's Participation in International Goals."

March 8th at 4 p.m.: Gen. Frank L. Howley, former commanding general, Berlin Command, U.S. Member of Allied Kommandatura in Berlin, now vice chancellor of New York University and author of "Berlin Command".

March 15th, at 4 p.m.: Ambassador G. P. Jooste, who will speak on "South African Problems".

The above programs provide support, through membership in the Palm Beach Round Table, to the scholarships awarded by the Institute of World Affairs to selected students whose eventual leadership will contribute in their homelands to furthering world peace objectives.

IF AT FIRST YOU DON'T SUCCEED, TRY, TRY AGAIN", and Briggs S. Cunningham will try again next June for that precious "first" at Le Mans. Cheered on by his co-operative family and supported by his almost fanatically loyal employees, the indomitable Mr. Cunningham will enter his blue and white sports cars again and again, until he succeeds in bringing to America the world's foremost road-racing trophy.

The high point of a Cunningham crew year is June—all the other months are a build-up to June, and a recess from June. In that month, four times now, Briggs Cunningham and his dedicated engineers, mechanics and drivers have tried with every ounce of brains and brawn they possess to beat the lighter, faster continental sports cars at Le Mans. Four times they have planned well and fought gallantly; at several points victory was a strong possibility. They have shown Europe a good fight and American sportsmanship at its finest, but they haven't quite had enough speed and luck.

June, 1954 will undoubtedly be the year in which a Cunningham sports car will show its twin-exhausts to all the European challengers. Major changes are being made at the Cunningham factory — weight being taken off without sacrificing safety features — speed being added, with additional braking power to compensate.

Recent changes in the Cunningham include torsion bar springing, precision point steering, light underslung chassis and new streamlined body contours. The frame work of these speedy road racers is welded steel tubing, an undisputed safety factor. Powered by an engine and driveline of 310 HP Chrysler V-8 engine with modified Siata 4-speed transmission, they eat up the miles. Wheels are Halibrand cast magnesium disc with quick change center lock hubs, and the tires which must take such punishment are Firestone racing 7.00x16. The big brakes are four-wheel hydraulic, air cooled.

To enter his cars in the big road races under his own name as manufacturer Briggs Cunningham must fabricate in his establishment, and sell, ten cars every year. The main business of the Cunningham factory is building road racing sports cars. The factory personnel are always severely pushed to turn out the necessary commercial cars.

New and Better Cunninghams Readied for Le Mans

The sedans and convertibles bearing Cunningham labels are expensive—nine thousand and ten thousand dollars, plus taxes. Even at this price the probability is that Briggs Cunningham loses around five thousand dollars on each one he sells. Every car is a hand made and hand-fitted job.

In the case of his racing cars, when they are finally sold after having served the Cunningham crews to the best of their ability, they have been hard-used. They bring around fifteen thousand dollars as used cars, and here the loss to Cunningham is even greater than in the passenger cars. In the first two years of operation, the Cunningham automobile manufacturing venture had suffered a net loss of half a million. Few men could afford such an investment in futuristic engineering; but all who ride in cars will eventually benefit from his safety pioneering.

Washington Letter ~

Dear Dora:

Washington is just recovering from a severe case of "debutantitis," and a recurrence of the ailment is expected in the spring.

During the war years the debut, long gloves and white tie were forgotten, and after the war local Democrats were in no haste to revive these customs. However, since the inaugural ball last January men have appeared at all evening functions in white tie and tails and their ladies invariably carry or wear long gloves. Thus attired, one sallies forth to a small dance at the home of a friend where two years ago at such a function a gentleman in a dark business suit would not have been conspicuous. Are you surprised that the men don't complain? As a matter of fact, I think they rather enjoy the flattering figure they present, and, since the new fabrics are cool and light in weight, for the first time in history men can really be comfortable in evening clothes.

Although there were debuts during the Democratic administration, there were not as many nor did they arouse the attention manifest this year. Interestingly enough, there has been little of the "snob" angle, and a scarce display of wealth or possessions. The girls have been charming, interesting and well oriented. The attitude of the older folk has been one of vicarious delight in this display of delicious youth coupled with a deep recognition of the fact that only in its young people lies the real wealth of a nation, a treasure not to be spoiled by over indulgent parents.

Twenty-one debutantes from Washington, Baltimore, and Wilmington, Delaware, charitably curtsied for the benefit of the Damon Runyon Memorial Fund for Cancer Research, at the Fourth Annual Cotillion at the Shoreham Hotel. "Baltimore has its famed Bachelors' Cotillion, New York and Philadelphia their Assemblies, and Charleston the traditional St. Cecilia Ball. Washington can now take her place with her sister cities along the eastern seaboard," so read the foreword of the gilt covered ball program.

Chairman of the ball, Miss Mary-Stuart Montague Price, herself a post-deb of not too many years ago, was assisted by the following sponsors: Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower, the Vice President of the United States and Mrs. Nixon, His Excellency the Ambassador of Australia and Lady Spender, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Humphrey, Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Wilson, Attorney General and Mrs. Brownell, Treasurer of the United States Ivy Baker Priest, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Mrs. Arthur Radford, Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Robert Carney, Chief of Staff of the Air Force and Mrs. Nathan F. Twining, Brigadier General and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Cowen, Miss Constance Bennett, Mr. Walter Winchell, Mrs. George Barnett, Dr. and Mrs. Virgil Damon, Mrs. George Dixon, Mrs. Alexander Gordon, Mrs. Robert E. Lee, III, Mrs. Ernest Eden Norris, Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Roy St. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman.

Among the debutantes presented were: Miss Sandra Cowen, whose father, Mr. Myron Cowen, is our former ambassador to Belgium; Miss Elizabeth Campen Johnson, daughter of the former ambassador to China; Miss Virginia Young Thomas, whose father is the assistant commandant of the Marine Corps; and Miss Patricia Priest, daughter of U. S. Treasurer Ivy Baker Priest.

The attractive treasurer of the U. S. tells me that daughter Pat is having the time of her life. "Two years sooner, Pat would have been too young; two years later, she'd have outgrown this sort of thing. The timing is perfect for her, and I'm ever so grateful I reluctantly decided against giving her the name of Judith, always a favorite of mine. At this time I'm sure she'd hate being called Judith Priest."

In addition to the numerous private parties of presentation, Washington survived two other large debutante affairs: The Washington Assembly Christmas Ball (formerly the Virginia Assembly which started in Richmond) on December 18th, at the exclusive Sulgrave Club, and the Joint Washington Debutante Ball, on December 21st, at that masculine heaven the Metropolitan Club. Not to be out-done by the girls, on December 30th a group of the town's attractive young men, dubbing themselves "Dubutantes," had themselves presented at their "Dubutante Ball," thus returning the many courtesies extended to them.

Behind the scenes running these many affairs—and believe me they take a lot of organizing—are two groups of people: the ubiquitous mothers of the current crop of debbs and the various social secretaries. Important among these is Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, who sort of "took over" when Washington's most loved and most important social secretary, Mrs. Rose Douglas Merriam, died several years ago, and there are still a few people who won't give a party without first consulting Mrs. Hetzel, but in Rose Douglas Merriam's hey-day you just didn't have a party unless Rose handled it for you. New arrival on the scene, pretty and young, Mary-Stuart Montague Price has a gay informal manner with young people that insures a promising future in this field.

A very pleasant Monday diversion at which one can always count on having fun and seeing friends and celebrities is the "Washington Party," a fashion show luncheon at the Statler Hotel, directed by Mrs. Gladstone Williams and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Jr. At present Mrs. Hearst is recuperating at home from a back injury incurred while riding horseback at the Maryland ranch home of Mr. and Mrs. Garvin Tankersley. The latter, you remember, is the former editor of the Washington Times Herald and daughter of the late Congresswoman Ruth Hanna McCormick Sims. Surprise feature of the Christmas "Washington Party" was Santa himself, fashionably modeled by popular Washington lawyer, Roy St. Lewis.

Everyone was delighted when Mrs. Perle Mesta briefly returned to town early in December. The newspaper chatter about who will be number one hostess is pure rubbish. Both Gwen Cafritz and Perle Mesta are crazy about each other, at least Gwen must be, because at a dinner at the Sulgrave Club she dashed over to the stair well to catch a glimpse of Mrs. Mesta departing to attend a dinner the Joe Davies were having in her honor. Returning to the table Gwen glowed: "Perle looked wonderful. I have so much respect for that woman. She's really a very great person."

Mrs. Mesta's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Tyson will move to Washington and the trio will reside together. When Mrs. Mesta met Prime Minister Churchill in England, he chuckled and greeted her with "Ah, Perle Mesta, the famous Call Me Madam." One of the first persons Mrs. Mesta called upon her return was beloved Roberta Vinson, widow of the late Chief Justice. The present Chief Justice is also a friend of hers. He and his family attended the best party Mrs. Mesta says she ever gave, her London Coronation Ball, where the three Warren daughters "stayed until six in the morning."

Especially missed at the Christmas season were the Wiley Buchanans and their lovely family, but reports indicate that they are having a wonderful time at the embassy in Luxembourg. Miss Betty Burton, now with FOA in Paris, entertained for them on their en route stopover where they also were greeted by newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Edmund C. Monell, who had been vacationing in Italy. The beautiful "Feets" Monell, formerly of Virginia's horsey Warrenton, ordered several dazzling gowns before leaving Rome.

The United States Ambassador to Cuba and Mrs. Arthur Gardner spent the Christmas season in Washington with their children and grand-children and were on hand when lovely daughter Suzanne made yet another debut bow at the joint Washington Debutante Ball, despite the fabulous dance her parents gave her last June. "The Gardners love Cuba, and the Cubans love the Gardners" reports young Mrs. Arthur Gardner, Jr., whose husband, fresh out of the Coast Guard, has joined the brokerage firm of Auchincloss, Redpath and Parker.

There really are a lot of wonderful things to work for, but, as I close this already too long letter, I can't help grinning over an evil remark of a sedate old Washingtonian who, miffed over the activities of what he termed "pushie new comers," dismissed them forever with the label "Washington's Cafeteria Society." Sincerely yours, RUTH

On the Sports Horizon . . .

WITH TOMSTONE GOLF COMPETITIONS, a Father and Son golf tournament at the Palm Beach Golf Club, tennis round robins, the opening of the polo season, greyhound racing at the Palm Beach Kennel Club, and the annual Sailfish Derby starting the season with a rush, prospects are bright on the sports horizon for an extremely busy winter season.

In golf, the Everglades Club's course was the first to open and naturally drew players in droves. Golfing members of the Bath and Tennis Club, the Seminole Club and the Sea Spray Club as well as members of the Old Guard Society of Palm Beach Golfers, who are also members of the Everglades Club enjoyed the game made famous by the Scots crowded the Everglades Club course.

Of course, when the Seminole and the Palm Beach Golf Club opened, members of those clubs naturally drifted back to their own clubs and lightened the traffic at the Everglades course.

The first tournament of the season was played by the Old Guard Society of Palm Beach Golfers. They staged their annual handicap match play tournament in December and a large field competed. Colonel A. B. Drake is president of the Old Guard with John U. Cushman vice president. James Y. Arnold is secretary and treasurer and Alanson C. Deuel, immediate past president. The board of governors for 1954 is composed of James M. Ballentine, John E. McAuliffe, Theodore F. Berghaus, and J. Clinton Roraback.

John Cushman is the team captain for 1954 while Stafford B. Beach is assistant secretary.

The golf committee is composed of Earl A. Ross., president and chairman; Shelby A. Greer, vice chairman; Paul A. Bennett, Marshall E. Rinker, Richard W. Woolworth, Gilbert Drake and John U. Cushman, ex officio.

The first handicap match play was won by Colonel A. B. Drake from Gus Schmid. The colonel is one of Palm Beach's top golfers.

Turnouts for the tombstone competitions at the Everglades Club were exceptionally large. The first tombstone of the season resulted in a tie when Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Currah and Mrs. J. C. Bliss, Jr., dropped their ball in the eleventh cup.

Other scores follow:

Mr. and Mrs. William Klopman 4 inches from 11th cup; Mrs. E. Dawes and J. E. McAuliffe 1 foot from 11th cup; Mrs. C. B. Long and T. Woodward 4 yards from 11th cup; Mr. and Mrs. W. Harold Hoffman 11 yards from 11th cup; Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Corya 19 yards from 11th cup; Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Langham 49 yards from 11th cup; Mr. and Mrs. John Cushman 51 yards from 11th cup; Mrs. G. H. Dempsey and G. S. Foster 175 yards from 11th cup; Mrs. Hu Woodward and Paul Cushman in the 10th cup; Mrs. J. E. McAuliffe and Ken Rich in the 10th cup; Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Bishop 3 yards from 10th cup; Mrs. V. C. Smith and A. Davis Bint 4 yards from 10th cup; Mrs. A. Ceranadas and John Vietor, 10 yards from 10th cup; Mrs. T. Woodward and Dr. I. D. Kelley, Jr. in the 9th cup; Mrs. J. W. Peck and E. Schmid in the 9th cup.

Prizes were awarded by Mrs. Shelby Greer and Mr. Paul Cushman.

Jack Ross, the dapper professional at the club deserved a pat on the back for the manner in which he handicapped the players in the second tombstone of the season.

For the first time in many years, a three way tie resulted, when the second tombstone was staged. Mr. and Mrs. W. Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Balcom and Mr. and Mrs. John Ryerson all finished in the eleventh cup. Prizes for the competition were donated by Dr. and Mrs. Harold W. Corya.

Other competitors finished as follows:

Mrs. V. C. Spalding and J. L. Terry 2 in. from 11th cup; Dr. and Mrs. Harold W. Corya 10 in. from 11th cup; Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Shevlin 2 1-2 ft. from 11th cup; Mr. and Mrs. James H. Howard 3 1-2 yds. from 11th cup; Mr. and Mrs. William Klopman 4 yds. from 11th cup; Mrs. J. J. O'Brien and Philip Schell 48 yds. from 11th cup; Mrs. C. B. Long and T. Bath and Tennis Club members, as did those at the Everglades Club, found that tennis pros Frank Voight, at the Bath and Tennis, and Herman Peterson, at the Everglades Club, had new shops which were the last word, so to speak, in such shops.

Two very important items of sport news interest came when it was announced that both the Palm Beach Country Club and the Palm Beach Kennel Club had been sold. A group headed by Morris Brown of Palm Beach purchased the Palm Beach Country Club from A. M. Sonnabend, owner of the Whitehall, the Sun and Surf, and other Palm Beach properties. Immediately upon completion of negotiations scores of workmen were put to work reconstructing the golf course and turning the old clubhouse into a thing of beauty. A swimming pool and cabanas were built and a tunnel con-apparently will stress teaching of the youngsters. Herman Peterson at the Everglades Club planned junior round robins every Saturday morning. Frank Voigt at the Bath and Tennis Club and James Kenney at the Sea Spray Beach Club also plan to bring the youngsters to the front.

Charley Wood, mentor at the Coral Beach Tennis Club also plans tournaments for the younger racquetters.

There was a bit of disappointment that the Palm Beach Golf Club abandoned the famed Lake Worth Golf Championship, which was approximately 49 years old. A Father and Son tournament played during the last two days of December and the Winter Golf League of Advertisers tourney caused the Golf Club officials to abandon the Lake Worth tournament which had practically become the property of the fire fighting Dub Pagan, who, during the summer, became a professional.

A bit of fast action is shown on the beautiful tennis courts at the Everglades Club where huge galleries turn out for the exciting matches. structed beneath the roadway leading to the beach. Although the sale price was not stated, it is said that the improvements cost in the neighborhood of one and a half million dollars.

After holding the property for three years Berlin Griffin, Edward Latimer, Arthur Pierson, Jr., and others disposed of the Palm Beach Kennel Club for $1,650,000 to the Carolina-Virginia Racing Association which is headed by John Boggiano, president, John Masoni, and Samuel Lombardo. Mr. Masoni and Mr. Lombardo are Cleveland contractors. They recently signed a contract involving millions of dollars to build the Ohio turnpike. Messers Griffin, Pierson and Latimer purchased the local track from the late H. Phil Bryan and J. Stockton Bryan for $1,350,000.

The greyhounds began their ninety-night greyhound racing the night after Christmas and the clubhouse was filled with many prominent members of the Palm Beach colony.

Records were broken opening night when the curtain rose on a gigantic crowd which packed the clubhouse, grandstand and grounds.

Tennis professionals at the various clubs this season the Palm Beach Men's championship, which are played later in the season, will of course be staged again this season. It may seem strange to some but the women's championship always draws far larger galleries than the men's tournament. No one seems to know the reason for this for the men players score much better, hitting longer shots from the tee and playing terrific irons. The women players, however, more than hold their own on the putting greens.

Putting tournaments have been growing in popularity. The Everglades Club stages its putting play every Wednesday afternoon. In addition to the large putting green at the Palm Beach Golf Club where putting tournaments are staged, C. W. Wannop, managing director of the Breakers, has had an extremely large putting green constructed in front of the hotel.

Dan Taylor also had a putting green installed between the Palm Beach Biltmore Hotel and Lake Worth. In fact, it is so close to the water that a 'wild' putt might drop into the lake.

At the Seminole Golf Club the sports horizon is extremely bright with many tournaments being scheduled.

THE STRIP OF BEACH now known as Ponte Vedra welcomed its first visitor, Ponce de Leon, some five hundred years ago, and has been holding open house for sun-lovers ever since. Apart from the loyal devotees of "the colony" there are travellers from every corner of the globe who come to stay at The Inn, The Innlet, or with friends.

Among those who keep a permanent place in the sun are the Robert Maytags, who have just built a beautiful house by the sea. They leave it only long enough to pursue mutual hobbies of big game hunting and fishing. Mrs. Maytag has just returned from one of numerous safaris, and this trip she had the pleasure of being the first white woman permitted to visit restricted Lake Rudolph. Robert Ruark speaks often of "Harriet's" skill and nerve in his new book, "Horn of the Hunter."

Another prominent and widely travelled couple are Mr. and Mrs. William F. Halsey, Jr., of La Jolla, Calif. The Halseys have just enjoyed another vacation at The Innlet, golfing daily and being entertained by a host of old friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Hollyday, en route home to Washington, stopped over long enough to visit Mr. and Mrs. Joseph LeMaster. Mr. Hollyday, administrator of the Federal Housing Authority, came south to speak to the bankers' convention in Miami.

returned to this country after a two-year sojourn in Europe, the last year of which she spent at her villa in Capri.

Miss Clausen has spent numerous vacations at the Colony Hotel in Palm Beach. She was seen daily on the tennis courts while at Ponte Vedra.

The resort welcomed back Mr. and Mrs. Robert Edwards, former colonists now living in Chicago. Mrs. Edwards, the daughter of Mrs. Sydney Vere-Smith and the late Mr. Vere-Smith of Palm Beach and Greenwich, Conn., has long been a tough competitor in the golfing circles of Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. McGraw (Mr. McGraw is president of McGraw-Hill Publishing Co.,) enjoyed the tennis courts during their stay, while Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Goodall, of Sanford, Me., were seen daily on the golf course. Mr. Goodall, president of Goodall-Sanford Co., competed regularly with Mr. Russell Fairbanks of Collins Avenue, Miami Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thackera of Shrewsbury, N.J., spent two weeks at The Inn, will return in March to rent a cottage of their own. They golfed frequently with Mr. and Mrs. Charles McK. Lynch, of Greensburg, Pa.

The usual number of honeymooning couples were in evidence, too, as the season got under way, reminding one that Old Ponce was looking for the Fountain of Youth when he first sighted Ponte Vedra's shores.

RACE SPECIAL FROM THE BILTMORE

WITH ANOTHER BRILLIANT HIALEAH SEASON under way, horse racing fans are enjoying services of the now familiar Palm Beach Biltmore special train, making daily trips to and from the Miami track.

The "race special," inaugurated by Biltmore owner Daniel E. Taylor, started its first run from West Palm Beach direct to the gates of Hialeah three years ago. It is now a definite part of the Palm Beach picture. The popular train, available to all residents of the area, makes only one stop en route, at Delray Beach, to pick up passengers. Residents from this fashionable polo playing community reserved an entire car for the opening run this season.

Operating six days a week during the Hialeah meet, the Biltmore "race special" departs daily from the F.E.C. station, West Palm Beach at 11:30 a.m., returning in ample time for the dinner hour. Comprising streamlined, air conditioned coaches and club cars, tickets are procured either at the Biltmore or at the station prior to departure. Sandwiches and beverages are served en route and also on the return trip.

An added feature at Hialeah this season is the beautiful new clubhouse and enlarged dining room. Turf fans now are able to purchase reserved seats in the clubhouse section as well as the grandstand section. These tickets are sold on the train, thus avoiding any delay on arrival, and the Hialeah management has set aside a group of reserved seats for patrons of the Biltmore's "race special."

December at the twin-towered resort was highlighted with the always brilliant opening cocktail party, hosted by owner Daniel E. Taylor for some 500 residents of the Palm Beaches. Staged on the beautiful palm studded Cabana Terrace, nature provided a gorgeous orange setting sun for the occasion which illuminated the entire sky, glimmering over the blue waters of Lake Worth.

Palm Beachers welcomed by Mr. Taylor and general manager James J. Farrell included the Messmore Kendalls, of Palm Beach Playhouse fame, the F. Jerome McNultys, Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Schwill, Arthur Pierson, Jr., William H. Dyer, and a host of other notables.

Carlos Pizsa, Cuban consul in the Palm Beaches, greeted the delegation of fifty prominent Cubans of the industrial, business and social world of Havana who planed over for the occasion. Mr. Taylor's two brothers Alfred and William, and Mrs. Alfred Taylor of Norfolk, flew down for the weekend, accompanied by Ralph Holt of Burlington, N. C. Three orchestras were on hand and later a sumptuous dinner was served in the Tropical Room where a colorful floor show was presented.

Shortly before Christmas, John Boggiano and Paul Cleland, new owners of the Palm Beach Kennel Club, entertained for around six hundred guests at a cocktail party, also held on the Cabana Terrace of the Biltmore. Following the party guests adjourned to the Tropical Room for one of chef Pettengill's sumptuous buffet suppers.

The West India Room and Terrace continues as the favored nitery of Palm Beach with its unique French styled Sidewalk Cafe surrounded by illuminated tropical shrubbery. Walter Feldkamp and his well known society orchestra opened here early this month.

The yachting colony is humming with activity. In December the 125-foot floating palace of the Leon Mandels, the "Carola" cruised into port for the season. The T. G. Markley's yacht, out of Baton Rouge, arrived in time to take part in the Orange Bowl Navy parade of yachts. The Markleys are always a welcome addition to the yachting colony at the Biltmore docks and are noted throughout the island for their scintillating cocktail parties aboard ship. Also back in port from Portland, Me., is Col. Ed. Sprague, president of the Sprague Steamship Co. at the helm of his super-streamlined "Lion's Whelp."

The Sunday afternoon fashion shows continue to be held on the Cabana Terrace of the Biltmore and are preceded by the popular Sunday buffets on the patio Terrace.

Par Avion from Paris

PARIS STARTS THE NEW YEAR WITH A NEW FACE. A new first family in the Elysee Palace, a new government in the Quai d'Orsay, and a French royal family on home soil for the first time in 68 years. In March there will be a new first family of Britishers in the rue du Faubourg-St-Honore—Sir Gladwyn and Lady Jebb. Sir Gladwyn, cherished by American TV audiences for his dry wit, immediately proved his diplomatic fitness to the complete satisfaction of the French. Asked if he liked the prospect of going to France he beamed: "What man in his right mind wouldn't be delighted at the idea of living in Paris?"

What man, or woman, indeed.

Happiest of all to be here are Monsigneur le Comte de Paris, Madame la Comtesse, and their eleven children. The pretender to the French throne and his royal (and loyal) wife were married in exile; their five sons and six daughters were born on foreign soils. Their yearning to come home can be imagined, and they might have come three years ago, with the repeal of the old law of exile, except for the housing shortage. It has taken the Count, heir of the kings who decorated the French landscape with palaces and chateaux, exactly that long to find a roof for his family. It had to be quite a big roof and he finally found it, at Louveciennes, near Marly. It is appropriately named Coeur Volant.

A gentilhomme, or manor house, Coeur Volant is set in a large park. Actually, the three-story Normandy-type house isn't large enough for the whole family—the seven younger children live in a small dependent house which they called "Snow White." The older ones, the princes, Henri and Francois, and the princesses, Isabelle and Helene, are housed with their parents, each girl having, for the first time in her life, a room of her own.

The Count and the Countess are both of the house d'Orleans, descended from Louis Phillippe, last of the royal kings of France. The Countess was Isabelle d'Orleans-Bragance, the Count, Henri d'Orleans, son of the late Duc de Guise and nephew of the late Duc d'Orleans. He was already in exile when he became engaged to the princess, and so was prohibited from coming to the large reception her parents gave in Paris to announce the betrothal. He had his champagne across the border, in Belgium. They were married in Sicily, and for twenty-two years divided their time between Belgium and Portugal, hovering as near their country as they could, waiting for the call to come home. They are proud of the "stairs" their children make—ages 21, 20, 19, 18, 15, 13, 12 (the twins), 10, 7 and 5.

It is a saying in France that if you have a title, then you have of course no money; if you are of royalty you have even less. This royal family lives frugally; the count drives himself to work in his 16-horsepower Citroen, Isabelle takes the Metro to the hospital where she is studying nursing, the Countess rides a commuter's train to Paris. The young princesses each get one evening gown a year, if they plan their budgets wisely.

This, their first winter in Paris, will be the gayest season of their lives, climaxed by invitations to the June debut, in London, of Princess Alexandra, the Duchess of Kent's daughter, who has been their guest for three months. Like most fashionable English girls, Alexandra is having her cultural finishing in Paris by living en famille in a French household. The family of the Count de Paris is ideal for her, with four gay and fun-loving young people her age and, to direct her to the cultural things, the Countess, who knows the inside of Paris museums almost as well as do their curators. Alexandra was well-launched on her Paris venture: her mother, her brother the Duke of Kent and Lady Churchill brought her across the channel.

The Count de Paris, handsome, slender, very blue-eyed, with black hair and black moustache, devotes his working hours to the study of his country's problems, discussing their possible solution in a bulletin which he publishes and sends, free, to those engaged in the administration of France. When Paris editor Francois Brigneau asked him if he believed it possible that a political reversal might bring back a monarchical system, with him at its head, he answered: "I am at the service of my country. If, tomorrow, my presence is considered necessary, if it is believed that my presence is capable of giving France what now seems to be lacking, I will be ready."

In repealing the law of exile, the French government seemed to have no expectation of such a turn of events.

The Count's first important social appearance was arranged for December 29, as the bride's witness at the marriage of Princess Marguerite d'Aosta of the house of Savoy, and Archduke Robert of Austria, in the small French city of Bourg-en-Bresse. Prince Xavier of Bourbon was the bridegroom's witness.

For a number of reasons, this was Europe's most interesting wedding of the year. For it, special arrangements were made between the Bishop of Belley and the French ministry of fine arts to have the celebrated church of Brou reconsecrated so that the nuptial mass could be celebrated in it. When the church became an historical monument, under the supervision of the government, it had to be "unblessed." It is a magnificent old church, and draws almost as many tourists as Chartres.

The young people had good reason for wanting to be married in this setting. Bresse in the middle ages was a province of the duchy of Savoy. The church was built by Marguerite of Austria, almost five hundred years ago, and she and others of their ancestors, Marguerite of Bourbon and her son, the young Philibert le Beau, are buried in it, their tombs surmounted by effigies so lifelike they seemed to be guests at the wedding. The windows are famous; last year

If France had a royal throne, this handsome couple would grace it. Their coat of arms bears the three fleurs-de-lis of the kings of France. But, for the Count and Countess de Paris, just being at home is enough. With the repeal of the old law exiling the heir to the throne, they are permitted, for the first time, to live in France. With their eleven children, they are installed in a house of their own near Paris.

The sands of Nice along an almost tideless sea lined by glomorous hotels, surrounded by the hills of Provence that lead upwards to sunny Alps: rendezvous of aristocracy.

one of them was on loan to the Louvre for an exhibition of stained glass. The carvings on the altars and stalls are unbelievably detailed; one panel, known as "the marriage correction" because it shows a husband spanking his wife, caused some smiles among the wedding guests. The bride and bridegroom are both six feet tall.

When they walked to the church through the town, between rows of townspeople in costume and Austrian students with drawn sabres, they were a regal sight. Heading the march was the bridegroom's brother, Crown Prince Otto, with Duchess d'Aosta, the bride's mother. Following them were Empress Zita and her son, the bridegroom. Then ex-king Humbert of Italy, conducting the bride. Everybody more or less in exile, and yet supremely at home, every ancient stone around them bearing in effect the arms of the traditionally linked houses of Savoy and Austria.

The wedding feast was exceptional too. Bourg-en-Bresse is one of the great culinary centers of France; from this region comes the celebrated poulet de Bresse, the last word in chicken the world over.

"A curtain without recall has fallen on the last scene of Henri Bernstein's best play—his life." Thus one Paris critic began his evaluation of the late dramatist's place in the theatre, and in the life of Paris. In saluting the playwright's talent, one must also acknowledge the driving urge which impelled him to work as if his livelihood depended upon it. The son of a rich banker, he might have spent his life at the races and in the gambling casinos which were the passion of his youth. His workshop and his home for the latter part of his life was the penthouse of his Theatre des Ambassadeurs, facing the American Embassy, his address the enviable No. 1 Avenue Gabriel. Around him lay the lovely Elysee gardens. For one who loved Paris, it was heaven in any season. His windows looked onto the Concorde and on those rare winter nights when there is snow in Paris, the flakes swirling around the obelisk make a scene for artists.

In spring, he looked into the snow of chestnut blossoms. But the sight below that he liked best, no doubt, was the stream of customers coming into his theatre.

All this, and the rosette of a chevalier of the Legion of Honor, Mr. Bernstein had.

Among the Christmas presents the Duke and Duchess of Windsor exchanged were some keepsakes brought "from home." Their short visit to London in mid-December could have been a trial balloon to test British reaction to the Duchess. Immediate press reaction ranged from the News Chronicle's ardent plea for "British acceptance, and a new role for the gallant Duchess" to a cool silence on the part of the Times. For a few days at Claridges and a long weekend with the Earl of Dudley at Hants, the Windsors brought with them 21 suitcases and 14 trunks—what the London public saw of their contents was a brown tweed suit the Duchess wore when she went shopping. Perfectly plain, double-breasted, it would have looked like a million other well-made suits in Mayfair except that it had the Duchess of Windsor inside of it.

Not everything worn by Her Majesty Elizabeth R-II is hand-made by Norman Hartnell. On her world tour the Queen has with her a whole wardrobe of little off-the-rack cottons, for hot climates, chosen by her on agreement with the manufacturer that no dress would be put on sale in London until after she had been photographed wearing it. But, naturally, before she could get to it, out popped a demure, long-sleeved one, sprigged with Victorian roses, tagged $14.75, and there was a rush to Bond St. for it. It's so cute, we suspect the Queen was saving it for a special occasion. "Poor Lilybet" as Princess Margaret once said sadly, "not even one little romance for her very own." She might have added—or one little cotton dress.

A British journalist tells me that his paper, famous for its unauthorized scoops on the royal family, received a blistering reprimand from the Queen on the eve of the coronation, for saying that she was writing her speech to the Empire with a gold pencil. With the prospect of going to the Abbey wearing half her weight in gold and jewels, the pencil was the last straw. She made it clear she was using a little old wooden one, like editors write with.

To the London public, Princess Margaret is "dear little duck."

Nassau . . .

NASSAU, BAHAMAS — The biggest, brightest and most glamorous social season in Nassau's history has begun!

That prediction is the one voiced by Nassau's winter colonists as this year's winter season was launched.

Homes opened early this season, as winter colonists sped South in a determined effort to have their Nassau homes open for a record number of parties.

The opening of the Drake Hotel, held before the traditional December 15 opening date, was attended by a number of distinguished members of Nassau's social colony, and Mrs. W. G. Elcock, wife of the hotel's owner, Mr. W. G. Elcock of Sunningdale, England, received many compliments on the hotel's new decor.

The glamorous keynote to this year's social season was undoubtedly set by the early arrival in Nassau of the Colony's new Governor and commander-in-chief, His Excellency, the Earl of Ranfurly.

The arrival of the Earl and Countess of Ranfurly and their five-year-old daughter, young Lady Caroline, aboard the S.S. Nassau was an occasion of general rejoicing and considerable social significance. Lord and Lady Ranfurly were greeted on their arrival by an enthusiastic throng of well-wishers who lined Prince George Wharf here. As His Excellency stepped ashore from the Colony's new tender, the "Lady Moore," they were greeted by the acting governor, the Hon. A.G.H. Gardner-Brown, colonial secretary of the Bahamas, and by the provost-marshal, Lieut.-Col. R. J. W. Verrall, M.V.O.

A police guard of honor, wearing the colorful and impressive parade uniform of the Bahamas Police Force, gave the royal salute as Lord and Lady Ranfurly disembarked, and then presented themselves for His Excellency's inspection. Following the inspection, Lord and Lady Ranfurly, accompanied by the acting governor and Mrs. Gardner-Brown and the provost-marshal, walked to the Public Square, where they were introduced to the Hon. Guy McK. Henderson, Chief Justice of the Bahamas, and Mrs. Henderson.

The route was lined with eager crowds, anxious to get their first glimpse of the Colony's new governor and his Lady, and His Excellency and Lady Ranfurly smiled and nodded graciously to the mass of sightseers as they walked along the processional route.

Following their introduction to Chief Justice and Mrs. Henderson, Lady Ranfurly was presented with a bouquet by a representative of the Nassau Garden Club.

At the entrance to the Legislative Council Chamber, Lord and Lady Ranfurly were introduced to members of the Executive Council, and then proceeded upstairs to the committee room, where the president of the Legislative Council, Sir Kenneth Solomon, and the speaker of the Bahamas House of Assembly, the Hon. Asa H. Pritchard, were presented.

The introductions were followed by the impressive ceremony of appointment, at which the new governor's commission of appointment is traditionally read.

With Lord Ranfurly occupying the ceremonial dais, the provost marshal read the commission of appointment. The Chief Justice then invited Lord Ranfurly to take the oath of office, and administered the oath amid a hushed Legislature.

The president of the Legislature and the speaker of the House of Assembly then presented their addresses of welcome, and Lord Ranfurly replied and expressed, on behalf of Lady Ranfurly and himself, his pleasure at his new appointment.

The solemn and impressive ceremonies were witnessed by a number of socially distinguished residents and their guests, all of whom had received special invitations to attend.

Lord Ranfurly's arrival was extremely well-received by all members of the Colony, and His Excellency seems destined to be one of the most popular governors ever to grace that office.

Pekinese fanciers among the social colony's dog lovers acquired new followers with the arrival of Lord and Lady Ranfurly. Two household pets Lord and Lady Ranfurly brought with them are Billy, their pet Pekinese, and Koko, their parrot.

At 40, the Earl of Ranfurly is the youngest governor ever to hold that position in the Bahamas, and he brings to his high office a long experience in administrative affairs.

During World War II, His Excellency served with distinction in the Nottingham Yeomanry, a crack English regiment. He was captured, and later made a daring escape from an Italian prisoner of war camp.

Among early season arrivals was Dorothy, Lady Orr-Lewis, who has returned to "Villa Rose" for the winter, and has, as her house guests, her nephew, Mr. Gordon Hannay of the Royal Navy Flotilla Command, and Mrs. Mollie Edgar of London. Lady Orr-Lewis and her guests made a pre-seasonal visit to Col. and Mrs. Arthur McGrath of Unicorn Cay.

Early arrivals, too, were Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Chace of Boston and Nassau, who returned to open their home on the Western Road. The first pre-seasonal party staged by Mrs. Chace was a luncheon party at the Bahamas Country Club just before the holidays, at which she entertained 20 guests.

The Marquess of Winchester has returned for the season, and the Earl and Countess Poulett have opened their winter home. "Lille Hus," on Dick's Point.

Lord Beaverbrook returned to Nassau early in the season, and expects to spend a large part of the season in Nassau.

Eunice, Lady Oakes returned to Nassau accompanied by her son, Mr. William Pitt Oakes, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. William Pitt Oakes. Her eldest son, Sir Sydney, was one of the first of Nassau's winter residents to return this year, accompanied by Lady Oakes and their two children, Master Christopher Oakes and Miss Felicity Oakes.

Lady Rosamond Greaves has rented Lady Grotrian's charming home on the Eastern Road for the winter, and expects Lord and Lady Lovat as house guests, sometime during the season. Lord Lovat is the son-in-law of Vera, Lady Broughton, who expects to visit Nassau this winter as the house guest of the Hon. and Mrs. Guy McK. Henderson.

One of the first parties of the season was given by Sir Francis and Lady Peek at their home, "Tamarind," on East Street. A newly constructed swimming pool was a conversation piece, and the house itself, more than 140 years old, is one of the loveliest homes in the Colony.

Sir Victor Sassoon has returned for the season, after a successful summer and fall spent in England and on the Continent selecting stock for his hobby—horse racing. Sir Victor enjoyed his greatest success at the sport of kings last summer, when his horse, Pinza, won the Derby.

Other arrivals to date among the winter colony include Mr. and Mrs. Fred Edwards of Stamford, Conn., who have opened their home, "Norfred House," for the season; Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Creighton of Boston, who have returned to their rented home on Queen Street for the winter; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McNeill of London and Nassau, who have opened their "Windways" for the season, and expect to open their home at Governor's Harbor later; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Vernay of New York and Nassau, who have returned to their

The Colony

GRACIOUS HOSPITALITY AND FRIENDLINESS, is the "hall-mark" of the smart Colony, one of the most popular hostelrys in Palm Beach. The Colony is unique in the fact that it is large enough to command all hotel facilities for the convenience and comfort of guests, yet intimate enough to permit extra attention . . . personalized service, analagous to a private club.

Open all year, the same meticulous service which distinguishes mid-season here, is not relaxed during the summer months. In fact, the hotel has become very popular with summer vacationers, as well as the summer home of numerous resorters, who have found the air-conditioned building much more comfortable than their own homes.

In the ocean block on South County Road, the hotel has a superb location . . . in close proximity to everything, from the beach and shopping center to golf and tennis courses. Modern in architecture and decor, it is unique amid all of the Spanish architecture, which was the distinguishing mark of Palm Beach.

Mrs. C. Aubrey Cartwright of New York and "Casa Estella," Cap d'Antibes, France, who is again residing at her penthouse in the Colony. This is Mrs. Cartwright's third season at the hotel.

Entertaining at the Colony is more like hosting a dinner in your own home, than in a public place. The smart green and white decor, white ruffled curtains, mirrored wall for an illusion of spaciousness, candle-lit tables, all lend a dignified and home-like atmosphere. The gracious service and superb cuisine, for which the hotel has long been famous, complete the ideal picture.

The Colony cocktail lounge is an important rendezvous for resorters, both at the cocktail hour and late evening. And, the beverages served here, repeat the same top quality as that of the dining room. It is intimate and colorful and during the winter season, outstanding entertainers add to the enjoyment . . . also in the dining room, during dinner.

Reservations for 1954 are commensurate with last year, according to Bernard Cooley, executive vice-president and general manager of the Colony. "We anticipate a big season," he commented. In line with this, the hotel's program has been expanded, featuring a number of innovations, to lend interest to the already extensive plans.

Among distinguished guests, now in residence at the Colony: Mrs. C. Aubrey Cartwright of New York and Cap d'Antibes, France, who will occupy her usual penthouse for the season. This is her third year at the hotel; Mr. Sumner B. Welles former Secretary of State and Mrs. Welles, who stayed at the Colony for several weeks, before going to their home in Via Bellaria; Rear Admiral R. P. Kauffman of St. Louis who is spending his second season here; Mr. and Mrs. Claude Durham Smith of Asheville, N.C., whose winter home has been the Colony for a number of years; Mrs. E. P. Cassell of Providence, Rhode Island, another former guest; Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Berkson of New York; he is general manager of International News Service and she is Eleanor Lambort, noted publicity director of the New York Dress Institute; Major and Mrs. Horace Dodge, who have a penthouse for the entire season.

The Hon. Mrs. Frederick E. Guest entertained at a luncheon at the Colony, for her house guests from England. Mr. Sumner B. Welles was also a luncheon host. Lady Muriel Bailey had a small luncheon party.

Key West

NO PERSON WHO JOURNEYS TO FLORIDA, either in winter or in summer, should miss an opportunity to travel over one of this state's most spectacular roadways—"the highway that goes to sea"—to visit the unique, enchanting city of Key West, southernmost point in the United States.

Key West is 218 miles southeast of Palm Beach, not a long distance in these days of speed, but the traveler will find the trip so intensely interesting he will be astonished at the length of time it takes to make the journey. Along almost every mile of the way he'll find something to attract his attention, but these many delays will be enjoyable ones, and a trip from Palm Beach will long be remembered.

Key West, at one time, was the largest city in Florida. Close to the tobacco centers in Cuba it flourished. Cigar making, chief occupation there, was a major industry in the state, and the townspeople looked for a bright future. But misfortune and disaster struck, and this big community on a tiny isle began to fade. Removal of big cigar factories from Key West to Tampa was a major blow, for it hampered employment. A hurricane that struck the keys and wiped out the only railroad to the mainland was a tragedy for this city, for it virtually was cut off from the world.

But that same hurricane brought about a new prosperity to Key West. The Overseas Road and Toll Bridge District was created, to raise money, through bond issues, to construct bridges from one tiny key to another. The Florida East Coast Railroad's right-of-way from Florida City to Key West was bought for $640,000. The Overseas Highway, stretching a distance of 122 miles across the Florida Keys, was built at a cost of $5,000,000. It is a triumph of engineering skill and ingenuity. On this road, motor traffic "goes to sea," with the Atlantic Ocean on one side, the Gulf of Mexico on the other.

One of the great problems was to find an economical design for placing a roadway deck on the bridge structure at Bahia Honda. Originally built for the passage of a single railroad train, it was not wide enough to carry motor traffic in both directions. For the engineers, the answer was simple: they built the highway up and over the top of the towering bridge structure, and the motorist is thrilled at "climbing a mountain" while he is driving his car "at sea."

Arriving in Key West, the traveler will find scores of points of interest to keep him occupied during an exciting visit. The "city that almost died"—lost its charter, in fact—is now a modern, progressive community. Luxury is at every hand, and around the corner are views of the Old World. The Key Wester Hotel and Cottage Colony is an example of what can be found in luxury and comfort with maximum informality. Situated on the ocean, this air-conditioned, year-around hotel provides efficiency apartments and ranch cottages, a salt water swimming pool, shuffleboard courts, and arranges recreation for its guests at golf or tennis at the nearby Country Club, or deepsea fishing from charter boats.

A trip to Key West should not be a short one; there are too many points of interest to see . . . the lighthouse, courthouse, Maine monument, turtle crawls, aquarium, Bahama houses, fishing boat docks, Bay View park, and others too numerous to detail here.

This is the land once known as "The Island of Bones" because many warriors fell there in early American Days. "The Island of Bones"—"Cayo Hueso"—now Key West.

Saint Augustine

ONE OF THE CHIEF CHARMS of Old Saint Augustine is its great serenity and peacefulness that is sheerly delightful and it is this charm which attracts so many visitors here year after year. Much of the original old world charm of Spanish days has been preserved in this city resting along the old sea wall—the Spanish Quarter with its narrow, cobbled streets . . . the dignified elegance of Plaza de la Constitution . . . the ancient sea wall promenade . . . century-old buildings . . . quaint overhanging balconies and an almost forgotten way of life in which peace and contentment were the prime requisites of gracious living—these are the present day treasures of Saint Augustine.

Saint Augustine's winter visitors and members of the resident colony are fortunate in having two beautiful town locations for entertaining, around which the social activities of the city revolve. First is the majestic Hotel Ponce de Leon, considered one of the most beautiful resort hotels in the country, and one which offers so many wonderful facilities for all forms of entertainment. Conspicuous in their elegance are the grand parlors, the stately ball room, the great dining hall of truly noble proportions, fluted columns and mural decorations.

Friday afternoon bridge teas in the Gold and Rose Rooms and Wednesday afternoon teas on the Mezzanine are weekly features. A musical hour on the Mezzanine with coffee follows the dinner. The orchestra at these times featuring programs of classical music.

Attractions for the younger set center about the Venido Room where dancing is enjoyed to the strains of Meyer Davis Hotel Ponce de Leon orchestra; the clay tennis courts and the swimming pool. The latter, an Olympic-type pool, was built last year at a cost of $100,000. The Ponce de Leon Golf Club, is a popular rendezvous on Sunday nights when a de luxe buffet dinner is served by the chef de cuisine of the

One of Saint Augustine's most treasured landmarks is the Old Spanish Treasury pictured above. Here from now until spring will be held many social gatherings of prominence. The beautiful gardens surrounding the old mansion are settings for large afternoon teas and luncheons, while the formal dining room and tea room inside are used for dinners and bridge luncheons. Between the towering palm trees is seen the old frankincense tree, said to be the only one of its kind in the state.

Ponce de Leon Hotel. Dancing follows with the hotel orchestra furnishing the music. The cocktail lounge at the club, with its handsome modernistic decor has ample facilities for serving a large number of guests.

The first of several tournaments, in which nationally known golfers participated, was the Florida Winter Championship, January 27-31. Edward G. Flather, Jr., manager of Hotel Ponce de Leon announced a full calendar of events at both the hotel and Golf Club for this season.

The Old Spanish Treasury shares the spotlight with the Hotel Ponce de Leon for social activities. Not competing in any way with the magnificence of the hotel it has however the charm of mellowed antiquity. An ante bellum mansion, it was bought by a Dr. Seth Peck of New England in 1832. Years later it became the property of his granddaughter Miss Anna Burt, who bequeathed it to the City of Saint Augustine.

The Old Treasury is filled with rare and beautiful furnishings, many of them museum pieces. Notable are the Chippendale and Sheraton sets representing the accumulation of a century by those who love beautiful things and treasured them. The wide doors upstairs were so built in order to permit the passage of ladies with their huge hoop skirts. In the large drawing room on the second floor are many paintings and rare objets d' art. Notable among the paintings is one of St. Francis of Assisi and an original sketch by Audubon, the great American naturalist.

The board of managers of the Women's Exchange, custodian for the City of Saint Augustine, serve a weekly luncheon in the garden on Thursday and afternoon tea daily. The luncheons have become a "must" for the socially inclined, comparable in a way to luncheons at the Colony in New York, because you will find there only the right people. The patio and walled gardens have that charm and air of distinction which is only found in places showing tender care through the years. One of the many interesting trees is an old frankincense around which tables with gay colored umbrellas are placed.

The largest of a number of charmingly arranged parties, of the early season was the cocktail party with Major General and Mrs. Mark Lance as hosts. The party was given at the spacious home on the military reservation. Stunning arrangements of white chrysanthemums, red gladioli and native greenery were used by Mrs. Lance for the house decorations. A circular bar at the end of the main hall was a focal serving point for cocktails and other drinks and a delectable array of hors d'oeuvres and other seasonal delicacies were served from a beautifully appointed table in the candle-lighted, formal dining room. A massed arrangement of red and white

CHICAGO Letter

Here's a round robin for those of you who left early this season.

During the war, we acquired a sort of knack for nutshell notes to inform the military. You know how men are. "Just the facts, dear." No details. Everybody was too busy for anything but a general idea in our particular world.

And now that communications travel faster than sound by jet plane (Quick, Watson, our old physics book) we can't even keep up with ourselves. So you'll just have to keep an ear to the ground for vital statistics. But here's briefing you otherwise:

Talked to Mrs. Walter Paepke the other day. She's up to her pretty ears in Aristotle's Politics. The Paepkes are members of that original group of distinguished Chicagoans who some twelve years ago organized the great books discussions now spread worldwide. There was a smidgeon of Aristotle and Plato in the first year selections but now the eleventh year group is examining issues in a larger context. Mrs. Paepke, a director of the Great Books Foundation, contributed wisdom and charm to the TV panel last year and we hope the new channel goes on the air soon. We hear that there are some excellent great books discussion groups in and around Palm Beach. All right, then. What is happiness?

Of bracing Chicago flavor, during the 54th International Live Stock Exposition here in November, were many a gay dinner party at Saddle and Sirloin Club and the Matador Room. Eighteen-year-old Sue White of Big Spring, Texas, won the coveted grand award with her white-faced Hereford steer Lone Star.

Young dads and mothers are attending lots of special events for the small fry like Hansel and Gretel, the ice revue, and parties at all the clubs. The older youngsters are not missing much either during school vacations.

Have you heard that the new outer drive opened recently? Relieves the old Foster bottleneck. The view from Edgewater Beach now seems a little like ships on the gulfstream.

Saturday, November 7, handsome King Paul and beautiful Queen Fredericka of Greece were guests of honor at a banquet at the Conrad Hilton attended by most of the social and civic leaders of Chicago. The Chicago affair was the only large banquet included in the cross-country travels of the royal couple.

We know we haven't covered the lakefront. Just want you to know we haven't hibernated. And remember, our dear Palm Beachcombers, that Chicago in a top hat on a glistening snowy night is a sight to be remembered forever.

Curious Inventions of Creative America

THE FAIRY TALES OF ALADDIN and his wonderful lamp and the dreams of Jules Verne have captivated the imaginations of millions and still make very interesting reading for people of all ages.

But they pale into insignificance in the light of the actual accomplishments of the inventor. He has transferred the unbelievable fantasy of yesteryear into the commonplace of today.

Because of his efforts, the average American of today has an attractive home, electric lights, radio and television, and a host of appliances and services which were beyond the wildest dreams of a man in 1836 when the U.S. Patent Office was first established.

All great inventors as well as great men are "before their time." They have given us the comforts and pleasures of modern life. They have also given us a backlog of delightful humor, in the mountainous archives of the United States Patent Office. The sublime and the silly patents come from all of the 48 states.

The writer, a frustrated inventor himself, has collected over the years, copies of patents, pictures, stories and anecdotes all connected with inventing.

The world-changing and the wacky, the fascinating and the fantastic, the amusing and the amazing, were made glue-brothers in his scrapbooks. The zanier the invention the more honored its position.

Not the least of these being Frank M. Schmidt's invention, "Combined Fan and Fly Catcher".

It can get mighty hot in Duval County and doubly irritating with the pesky flies. Back in the first decade, Frank Schmidt of Jacksonville decided to do something about these twin evils and he did.

Frank liked to sit in his rocker in the shade of his porch. He yearned for a bit of breeze and for surcease of bother from the flies. He rocked and rocked and thought and thought. A fly buzzed by as he hit on an idea. Why not incorporate a fan and a fly catcher into one? He could cool himself with the fan and at the same time utilize the same energy to catch the pesky critters.

So he went to work. He fashioned two discs with handles. One fitting into the other. Each disc was covered with a sticky substance. As you fanned you caught flies. A friend could use one disc and help you catch flies while you fanned yourself. Then you could have a fly-catching bee with prizes to the one who trapped the most flies. A bee would get a forfeit of ten points.

Or you could hang one disc nearby and catch double the flies while you fan yourself with the other. Record fails to show how Schmidt and his friends made out with this ingenious idea.

By mathematical progression the fan would get heavier and heavier with the dead flies and you would be decreasing your energy to fan yourself. And that is where we all came in.

Modern Florida, thanks to the city and state fathers, does not have the same need for Mr. Schmidt's "Combined Fan and Fly Catcher" as their citizens in 1908, when the inventor received his Patent No. 884,213.

Mrs. Lili Aline McGrath, a housewife of Mississippi, tried to take the drudgery out of her work. This was in 1914, before the era of homes with push-button, labor-saving gadgets. She had a big house and lots of chores.

Floor polishing was the most back breaking work. She solved the problem in Patent No. 1,136,150. This was her story:

"The main object is to provide a means for floor polishing in a pleasureable manner. A further object is to utilize the weight of the person using same."

So she patented heel-less slippers with soles of some soft polishing material. "This material is varied to suit the type of polish to be used on the floor. Loops are at the rear of the slippers. A cord is passed through the slippers to connect them. The cord is long enough to permit the wearer a full dancing stride, but not long enough to permit the feet to spread too far apart and let the wearer slip and fall.

"To use: Just spread polish on the floor. Put on your polishing-dancing slippers, place on the latest dance record and dance. The weight of the dancer should help the floors get a better polishing than the customary elbow grease method." Thus, instead of a dancing party roughening up the floors, the floors will be highly polished while everyone is making like Vernon Castle. One can almost visualize the canny housewife planning a dancing party . . . On with the waltz!

Vero Beach

VERO BEACH IS VERY GAY. Many homes were opened early in the season, and many lovely parties were given. Among those who are in residence are Mr. and Mrs. Robert McDougal, of Peoria, Ill., they entertained at a small cocktail party for a few friends in their charming guest house, right after their arrival.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Clarke, of Newport and New York spent the holidays at "The Cottage" and are remaining for the rest of the winter. Their yacht "Reverie" is on its way down from the North.

Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Turner, of Chicago and Vero Beach, are in their home on Sand Piper Lane, Porpoise Point; the Robert Schencks, also of Chicago, are planning to spend a long season here as they have just completed their new house and are now settled—so well settled, in fact, that on Mr. Schenck's birthday they gave a party for about fifty.

Mrs. Nelson Plamondon had a few friends in for cocktails recently. It was a very busy day as Mr. and Mrs. Kromhout also entertained at their new home with cocktails.

Many of the winter colony have returned to the Riomar Club, which had its official opening on Christmas afternoon with a cocktail party. It was really delightful to see old friends talking over their summer activities and making plans for golf or tennis during the weeks to come, to say nothing of the beach picnics and barbeques.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Joe L. Earman and the James A. Wilsons held their open house, which is an annual event on Christmas Day. As usual both were a huge success.

The Christmas Charity Ball was held at the Windswept Hotel on Christmas night. In 1932 it was started as a party for the younger set and for the college students that were at home for the holidays. This year it was given for the benefit of the Indian River Memorial Hospital, and, as always, the guests of honor were the college group and the 'teen agers.

Members in charge of the ball were: Mr. Paul Goodridge, chairman; Mrs. Paul O. Semon, co-chairman; Mrs. Hershel Auxier, secretary and Mr. Merrill P. Barber, treasurer.

The chaperons were: Mayor and Mrs. Elmer J. Bauer, Mr. and Mrs. John Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Graves, Mr. and Mrs. Roswell Mower, Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Berger, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Wodtke, Mr. and Mrs. Danforth K. Richardson and Mr. and Mrs. Wilton Roger.

Mr. and Mrs. Roswell Mower, who always give wonderful parties, gave another on the twenty-sixth and entertained about sixty-five.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander E. Ryburn and their daughter, Sandy, gave a party on the twenty-eighth in honor of the young Bacon Hardees, who were married recently. This followed, by a day, the very nice "open house" given by Mr. and Mrs. George Cox.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudyard C. McKee, of Ardsley-on-Hudson, New York, were in Vero Beach for about a month with their two adorable children, Michael and Mary Jean. They thoroughly enjoyed both the off shore and Indian River fishing and hope soon to return.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Hecker, of Shaker Heights, Ohio, entertained a number of friends who came from Cleveland to be with them for the marriage of their son, Mr. Arthur Sterling Hecker, and Miss Mary Lusk, of Davenport, Iowa. The wedding rehearsal took place on the evening of the twenty-ninth and was followed by a party given by Mr. and Mrs. Hecker, Sr., for guests and the bridal party.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schenck are pictured here at a patio table at their home at Vero Beach.

Smart Restaurants

THE PALM BEACH PATIO, popular restaurant and night spot, launched its 24th season in spectacular fashion Dec. 26th when it broke attendance records for opening night. That performance was repeated just a week later when another big crowd of merrymakers flocked to the colorful club to offer the New Year a rousing welcome.

Outstanding success of these two events on the Patio's schedule indicate that this restaurant, long a favorite gathering place for Palm Beachers and their guests, is on its way to the best season in its history of almost a quarter-century in the resort. There is no secret, no mystery, to the Patio's popularity. Since it first became a part of the Palm Beach scene it has maintained a strict policy of providing only the finest of foods, the very best in dinner and dance music and excellent entertainment. And proof that this policy is a sound one is attested to by the scores and hundreds of discriminating patrons who make dining and dancing at the Patio a regular, definite part of their winter schedules.

Outstanding personages in business, society, sports and entertainment make the Patio their headquarters while in Palm Beach, and the restaurant's guest book could be turned into an international "Who's Who."

Co-directors are Dan Shalek and Val Ernie. The well-known "Maestro" Ernie and his Society Orchestra provide excellent music during the dinner hours and for dancing under the stars. A Patio feature is its open-air dining and dance room, but inclement weather makes no difference to guests there, for in a moment they are protected from rain or cool weather by a unique sliding roof.

Supervising preparation of the fine foods is Gaston Chevallier, formerly at LaRue in Paris and the Ritz Carlton in New York. Victor, formerly at the Cub Room at New York's Stork Club, is maitre d' and Peter (formerly at 21) and Danny are captains of waiters. Directing service at the bar in the comfortable cocktail lounge is Felix—South Hampton's golf champ.

Activity at the Patio starts each afternoon at 5, when guests gather for cocktails and parties in the little lounge at the restaurant's entrance.

Recent guests at the Patio included Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford II, Mr. and Mrs. Jock McLean, Miss Patricia Kennedy, Mr. Peter Lawford, Mr. and Mrs. Alfredo Cernandos, Mr. Milton W. Holden, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hodge, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Feltman, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Turnure, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Landseide, Miss Virginia Anthony, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Martino, Mr. R. D. Huntington.

EVEN THOUGH MIRAMAR opened early this season for the benefit of winter residents and visitors who didn't want to wait until January for a wonderful place to dine, the formal opening on January 14 was the start of Miramar's busiest time. Complete with fabulous fashion show, the overflow crowd at the formal opening enjoyed an evening to be circled in red on the social calendar.

From the time a customer walks past the tempting buffet display of food just inside Miramar's front door, and drinks his aperitif, until he has finished a dream dessert and after dinner cordial, he is treated to delight after delight in dining experience. Maison Royale on Royal Palm Way one of Palm Beach's newest restaurants, is a favorite place to dine for many of the resort's connoisseurs of good French food. The charming French atmosphere found there is also conducive to delightful luncheon and dinner parties. One may lunch or dine on the Parisian Terrace or private dining-room, or at the popular cocktail hour, from 4 to 7, one may visit friends while enjoying hot or cold hors d'oeuvres and their favorite drinks. During the cooler days and brisk evenings one will find two large fireplaces burning, and casting its rosy glow about the spacious rooms. Gregory, owner of Maison Royale, is always on hand to meet and greet his guests.

The delicious food is prepared by two French chefs, Carl and Jules, both of whom have had many years of experience in the culinary art. The waiters are also French, and the waitresses, attired in attractive French costumes, all go to make Maison Royale and its wonderful food a "must" when dining away from home. Two specialties of this famous restaurant are "escargot bourguignonne," and "coq au vin."

There is sometimes something a bit ludicrous about the printing of a menu in French in order to lend distinction to a restaurant. At the Maison Royale, however, the language is appropriate. This is not affectation but rightful homage. The pleasure of the taste is increased by the pleasure of association with an Old World of epicurean elegance when savoring a "Moulin a Vent" belonging to a great vintage year. Would not the sparkle in the glass be dimmed were we drinking "Windmill, 1937?"

When French cooks have prepared for you a "coq au vin" they have not done up chicken in a wine sauce. Besides their talent they have added that special dimension of the spirit of the great tradition which elevates cooking to an art and, subtly, makes it, as well, a nourishment of the spirit. A true "coq au vin" takes us through the medieval halls of the Dukes of Burgundy, into the Salons of the Age of Reason or the delicate Paris of Proust.

Also dining at Maison Royale recently were Mr. and Mrs. Philip D. Armour, Mrs. William Lightfoot Schultz and her daughter, Miss Betty Schultz, Mr. and Mrs. Mario de Tullio, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Burbusse, Mrs. John H. Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Winston P. Ayres, Mr. Charles F. Coe.

CHARMING BIT OF EUROPE IN PALM BEACH — that is Petite Marmite, located in the Worth avenue arcade, which opened for the fifth season December 5, with a capacity attendance. Featuring good food, atmosphere and superb service, it is one of the outstanding restaurants in the resort.

Petite Marmite, which is owned by the chef, Gus Puccillo, is continental in decor and cuisine. The brown and gold of the famous Petite Marmite container is used throughout the dining room and patio, highlighted by tropical flowers and plants. The varied and interesting menu includes both French and Italian foods; famous dishes which have long been a tradition in Europe and which you may have enjoyed at the Puccillo summer place at Newfane Inn, Vt.

For the convenience of patrons, the patio this season has a protective roof . . . so one may dine or lunch out-of-doors in any kind of weather. There are also a number of other additions and improvements in the dining room and kitchens.

Among the intriguing items noted on the extensive menu, which make a visit here a memorable occasion: frog legs provencale, scampi shrimp, Florida pompano amandine, sweet breads en casserole, cherry jubilee, zambaglione, and a selection of fine wines. Hors d'oeuvres here are included in the dinner fare.

Among those noted at Petite Marmite this season: Mr. and Mrs. George E. Kent Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Shevlin, Mrs. John C. King, Mrs. I. Sheldon Tilney, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Crocker, Mr. Axel C. P. Wichfeld, Mrs. Frederick Owsley, Comdr. and Mrs. A. Winfield Chapin, Mr. John J. Cisco, Mrs. John Hale Brelsford, Mrs. Margaret Marks, Mrs. A. Davis Bint.

Mr. and Mrs. John Coleman, Mr. William Cluett, Mr. William Q. Cain, Mr. and Mrs. Allison Armour, Mr. John Perona, Mr. and Mrs. Edward V. Quinn, Mr. and Mrs. Porter Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Lumen O. Peck, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Black, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Church Paull, Mr. and Mrs. Thorne Donnelly, Mrs. Mary Mitchell, Mrs. Charles Harding, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Lanfranchi.

LOCATED IN THE HEART OF PALM BEACH'S Rue de la Paix, yet tucked discreetly away from the hum of Worth Avenue traffic, Maison Lafitte offers all that one may expect in the finest cafes of Paris.

At the end of flower bedecked Via Parigi this charming restaurant serves luncheons and dinner daily featuring French and American cuisine. The menu always contains such provocative entrees as Jumbo Frogs Legs Provencale and Escargots de Bourgogne in addition to extra thick broiled lamp chops au Cresson and the eternally popular roast prime ribs of blue ribbon beef. In between there are a score or more of gastronomic master-pieces by Maison Lafitte's veteran chef.

Only the French seem to have the "know how" to toss a crisp icy salad of mixed vegetables with a delightful suspicion of garlic. Ask for a salad at this cafe and see what we mean.

Brief mention must be made of the desserts especially Baba Au Rhum. This is a fine textured sponge sliced across and sprinkled with a generous combination of light and dark rums, then reassembled and a dash more of liqueur then served "en flambee."

The wine cellar contains a number of extra fine Burgandies, some bearing the label of the Conference of Chevaliers du Tastevin.

Unexcelled French cuisine, served in plush Wedgwood-like surroundings created by indirectly lighted bas-relief murals, make Maxim's restaurant in Surfside, Miami Beach, a mecca for gourmets. New Orleans "white iron lace" also adds a decorative touch, as do blue-gray walls, mirrored posts and a two-tiered dining area. A favorite dining spot for Palm Beach residents in Miami, there's an unhurried, restful atmosphere about this restaurant, where service is prompt, and at its best—to please even the most fastidious diner.

Dining at the famous Scampi Restaurant in Boynton Beach; left to right (from end of table): Mr. Walter Dietz, Delray Beach; Mrs. Harold Van Horn, Delray Beach; Mrs. Fred Christiansen, Pompano Beach; Mr. Willard Watters, Delray Beach; Mrs. Irving Artz, Delray Beach; Mr. Jack Dittrich, Delray Beach; Mrs. Willard Watters, Delray Beach; Mr. Irving Artz, Delray Beach; Mrs. Harold Stielch, Delray Beach; Mrs. Jack Dittrich, Delray Beach; Mr. Harold Van Horn, Delray Beach; Mrs. Walter Dietz, Delray Beach; Mr. Ray Ochs, Delray Beach; Miss Gio Johnson, Delray Beach and Mrs. Ray Ochs, Delray Beach.

THE TWO SCAMPI RESTAURANTS, in Boynton Beach and Port Washington, Long Island, are well-known by gourmets all over the country. On U.S. 1 the Florida Scampi is an attractive place, set back from the busy thoroughfare in a spacious wooded setting. Excellent cuisine and service distinguish both restaurants. The famous "Scampi shrimps," served here according to an old-time recipe, is well-worth the trip. During the season, there is special background music for dining, to add to the enjoyment.

Spacious and provincial in decorative theme, Scampi is in a class by itself. It has more the atmosphere of a lovely old house than a restaurant. Accenting this quality is the gracious service and the superb food. The menu comprises French, Italian and American dishes, specialties of the house, which are prepared according to private recipes. A wonderful atmosphere for leisurely and gracious dining, in the old Southern tradition, plus old-world charm.

AMONG GUESTS NOTED RECENTLY at Maxim's Miami Beach restaurant was Mrs. Edward S. Moore, of "Circle M Ranch," Lexington, Ky., whose luxury craft, the "Big Pebble," is seen frequently in Palm Beach waters. Mrs. Moore, well known to Palm Beach's racing set, dined with Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Smith.

Other guests at Maxim's included Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hills, Miami and Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Roger Wolin, Mr. and Mrs. Earl J. Cosgrove, Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. John Montgomery, former Beachites now living in Junction City, Kans.; Mr. and Mrs. F. Lowry Wall, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smathers, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clements, Mr. Alfred I. Barton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moon, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moon, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Stubble, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Alworths and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Matzinger.

NEW YORKERS may boast of their swank clubs—"El Morocco," "21" and the "Stork"—But Palm Beachers this season have something brand new and startling that soon should become known in all parts of the world where persons of prominence gather to dine.

Club du Moulin Rouge, newly constructed over Nino's Continental restaurant, the result of long-range planning, is a restricted dining room for members and guests—recently referred to by New York society columnist Cholly Knickerbocker as "the 100." Nino's Moulin Rouge is said to be the only club in the world ever designed and decorated on a motif based on the life and work of an individual—in this instance, the artist Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec (1864-1901), habitue of the famed, original Moulin Rouge in Paris.

For many years the artiste Zito traveled the continent, reproducing Toulouse-Lautrec's paintings. Zito's works are the feature of Nino's Moulin Rouge.

The clubroom is oval, 46 by 32 feet. A settee around the room, providing abundant lounging space, is covered with red cloth with black dots, the dominating colors of the dress of those who frequented the original Moulin. Above the settee, between curtained panels, are Zito's reproductions of Toulouse-Lautrec's works. In the clubroom itself are 14; others are in the foyer. Decorations in the bar are identical with those in the Paris club.

Here in Nino's one may view Lautrec himself, as pictured in the Moulin Rouge of Paris, where he sat and caricatured other patrons. (Perhaps Zito will follow suit at Nino's, for Zito is completely enwrapped in Lautrec.) Seen, also, are Lautrec's "Jane Avril," "La Clownesse," the dancer, "La Goulue," and "La Modiste," the only girl with whom Lautrec ever was truly in love.

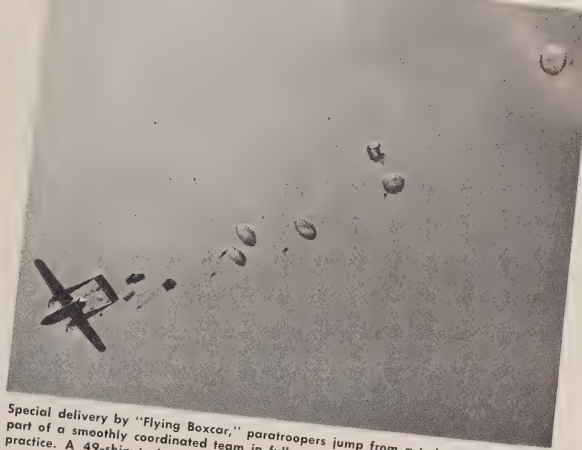

Music in the Lautrec room will be by Chancey Gray, director of one of El Morocco's orchestras.

The club's original members include Mrs. J. Jay O'Brien, Mrs. Frank Osgood Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Wrightsman, Mr. Philip Schell, Mr. and Mrs. Thorne Donnelly, General Rafael Trujillo, Mr. Joseph Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. Alfredo Cernandas, Mr. and Mrs. John Fenno, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford, II, Mr. and Mrs. Edward McLean, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Shevlin, Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Shirley, Mrs. Peggy H. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Emilio Tagle, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Obolensky.

The Continental's Capri room will continue its excellent service as usual, with violin and piano music furnishing dinner music. The Lautrec room will be open from 9 p.m. for late dinners, with the exception of Thursday nights, when there will be society dinner nights starting at 7 o'clock, and on Saturdays, when dinners also will be served at 7.

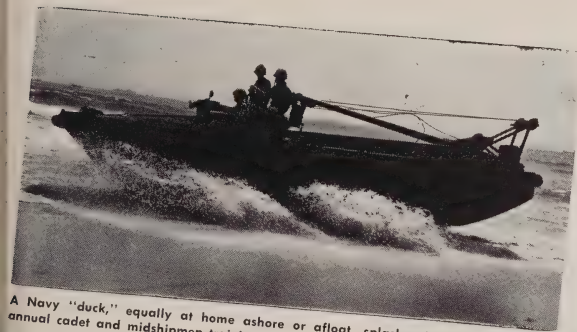

A 105 millimeter howitzer, a jeep and trailer follow the already landed truck to the ground as military men in training rush to utilize the war materiel dropped from a "Flying Boxcar."

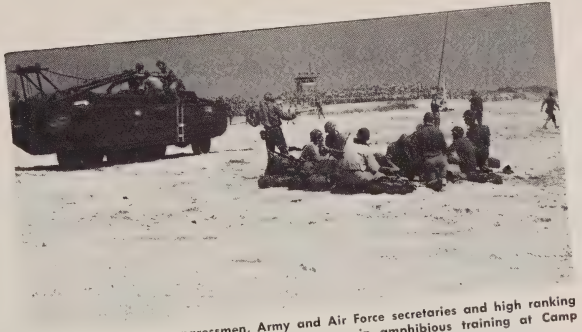

Special delivery by "Flying Boxcar," paratroopers jump from a twin-tailed C-119 as part of a smoothly coordinated team in full-scale air-supported amphibious invasion practice. A 49-ship task force landed 3,000 men by sea, with paratroop support.

Airborne-Amphibious Warfare Taught Future Generals, Admirals

A Navy "duck," equally at home ashore or afloat, splashes into the surf during annual cadet and midshipmen training as a team. In this operation future generals and admirals learn to work together.

Spectators, including congressmen, Army and Air Force secretaries and high ranking military and naval personnel watch maneuvers in amphibious training at Camp Pendleton, Virginia

Teamwork of all hands is necessary in placing one end of the heavy pontoon causeway on the beach and the other end attached to LST (Landing Ship, Tank) in rear.

Discarded life preservers litter the beach; tanks rumble over the sand and a sapper tests the terrain for mines in an active phase of Camid '53, Army, Navy and Marine combined training operation.

NASSAU in the BAHAMAS

... in the finest tradition!

It's a delightful place . . . a wonderful combination of continental charm, modern luxury, and noteworthy cuisine . . . just a step from the heart of old Nassau . . . yet secluded in a magnificent tropical estate with a superb view of the Harbour.

There are two creamy-white private beaches for swimming and water sports . . . a sparkling pool, largest in the tropics . . . championship tennis courts . . . guest privileges at the Bahamas Country Club . . . instruction by top-ranking pros . . . a lively but unobtrusive social program . . . dining and dancing in the air-conditioned Continental Room—everything, in fact, to make your stay at The British Colonial Hotel memorable!

AN IMPORTANT CROSS SECTION of contemporary art achievement will be shown during the winter months at the Mayo Hill Galleries' seasonal home in Delray Beach. Thomas A. Gaglione and Nathaniel Saltonstall, respectively manager and president of the Galleries, have arranged a number of exhibitions from December to April.

The season opened with a group showing in December of prints, theorems, silkscreens and lithographs, by Yasuo Kuniyoshi, Stuart Davis, Ben Shahn and John Marin. On January 6, the galleries presented an exhibition exclusively of Delray Beach artists. This was followed by a one-man show of seascapes by the prominent Delray socialite, Mrs. C. Herrick Hammond, formerly of Winnetka, Ill.

From January 18 to February 4, the galleries feature a joint exhibition of Henry Varnum Poor and Conger Metcalfe. Poor and Metcalfe are two of New England's best known artists. Poor's wide range of interests will be represented by ceramics, water colors and drawings. Metcalfe, whose reputation is fast growing beyond the boundaries of New England, is an artist who finds his greatest pleasure in drawing.

The following exhibition, from February 8 to February 25, features a man and wife show—Xavier Gonzalez and Ethel Edwards. These two artists divide their time between Cape Cod and New York, and have built an impressive following among private collectors.

On March 1 to March 15, David Fredenthal will be presented in a one-man show through the courtesy of the Charles Alan Gallery of New York.

Ten Great American Artists from the famous Downtown Gallery of New York will end up the season at the galleries. The artists are John Marin, Ben Shahn, William Zorach, Yasuo Kuniyoshi, Charles Sheeler, Stuart Davis, Niles Spencer, Bernard Karfiol, Arthur G. Dove and Georgia O'Keefe.

This is the Mayo Hill Galleries second season in Delray Beach at 1200 East Atlantic Avenue. The guiding aim of the Galleries has been to bring the art of 57th Street to vacationists in Florida during the winter, and on Cape Cod during the summer. Thomas A. Gaglione is the manager of the Galleries. Nathaniel Saltonstall, Boston architect, well known private art collector and founder and first president of Boston's Institute of Contemporary Art, is president of the Galleries.

A gala opening, in February, with proceeds to benefit a Delray Beach charity, will be announced at a later date, according to Mr. Gaglione.

Haiti - Shares the French Interest in Cuisine

Haiti, which has been called "France of the Caribbean," shares the French interest in cuisine and gourmets extol the delicate Creole cooking of this fascinating place. The exciting food being a merger of French, Spanish and African, it is acclaimed by connoisseurs as "the best food west of Paris."

Taking advantage of every opportunity to introduce the carnival spirit into daily living, the Haitians start their Madri Gras celebrations on Christmas Eve . . . continuing the gay festivities from Noel until Lent. And, food is an integral part of the convivial pageantry. Many of the carnival costumes and customs, songs and dances, have their origin among the aboriginal Indians of the Island. They also have been influenced through the years by Africa, France, Spain and England.

Mingling with the exciting rhythms of the drums and bamboo flutes, are the equally exciting aromas of crisp fried plantains and tropical fish. Carnival vendors fringe the edge of every group, selling such delicacies as grilled tasso (tidbits of turkey) and griots, which are small pieces of pork which have been soaked in the juice of sour oranges, scented with herbs and broiled over mahogany fires.

As the flower-decked floats with Oriental potentates, medieval princes, denizens of mythology and folklore parade through the streets, the "pate' women" stroll along the sidewalks vending the delectable small, hot flake pies, or pates as they are called in Haiti. These are filled with all kinds of savory mixtures, such as chicken, crab, shrimp, codfish.

Because of the huge supply of bananas in Haiti, which range in size from the tiny fig varieties, to the giant versions almost a foot long, they are on the daily menu. Consequently, there are numerous recipes for serving this popular tropical fruit. For a simple dessert, they are cut in half lengthwise and again, crosswise and delicately browned in a pan . . . served with powdered sugar and coconut or chopped nuts. For a special occasion, bananas are served "Au Rhum"; prepared by pouring Haitian rum over the fruit, lighted with a match and basted with the flaming syrup. As fascinating to look at, as they are delicious.

On Mardi Gras in Haiti, of course there must be pancakes. In the country, the popular version is the thick West Indian type; sometimes made with bananas or sweet potatoes. The more sophisticated thin pancakes, similar to the French, are served in the towns. The crepes sometimes rolled around sauteed bananas and then blazed with rum . . . "Crepes Mardi Gras".

The Haitian rum (Barbancourt) is made from the pure juice of sugar cane instead of the usual molasses. Ever since Count Barbancourt founded the company about one hundred years ago, this rum has been distilled as carefully, bottled as ceremoniously and aged as long and tenderly as a fine cognac. Only a few well-traveled connoisseurs in the United States, have known about it, according to the Haitians.

All through the West Indies . . . in the Virgin Islands, Trinidad, Puerto Rico, Jamaica, as well as Haiti, the delectable pates are extremely popular. Despite the French name, they are more akin to the Spanish and Portuguese "empanadas", in most cases; featuring the characteristic olive, pimiento and red pepper.

Adapted from the traditional Haitian recipes, they may be easily made at home and should create quite a lot of conversation at a cocktail, luncheon or supper party. The Haitian "Pates de Poulet" for instance, are quickly concocted of prepared pie crust and canned minced chicken. The same is true of the Pates de Morue (codfish patties), using prepared codfish cakes. Such things as garlic, onion, chopped pimiento, lemon juice, parsley, stuffed olives, Tabasco sauce, herbs, cayenne pepper, are added to the chicken or fish filling.

THE GROWING TREND TO LINCOLN

Furniture, courtesy Knoll Associates, Inc.

What started the big move to the new Lincoln?

Why have sales of this fine car more than doubled in two short years?

The answer lies partly in the new and imaginative ideas inspired by modern design, modern architecture, modern living.

Notice the clean-lined new front grille, the expansive new rear deck, the brilliant new styling all around, the exciting new colors and interiors. Then try this new Lincoln.

Its action and its handling tell you why Lincoln won the Mexican Pan-American Road Race two years in a row—sweeping the first four places in the stock car class.

The matchless Lincoln V-8 engine gives you new response with its new automatic 4-barrel carburetor. Handling is effortless; for Lincoln is the only fine car with ball-joint front wheel suspension.

Isn't a car as ahead-of-the-times as the new Lincoln worth an in-person look and a drive?
